Freeing of Enemy POWs Is Urged

Response Expectable, Griffin Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert P. Griffin, the Senate's No. 2 Republican leader, today urged the release of all sick and wounded enemy prisoners of war as well as 1,500 able-bodied captured North Vietnamese troops in hopes of securing freedom for American POWs.

"Such a dramatic, humanitarian initiative would create, worldwide, an expectation of response in kind by the Communist side," said the Michigan Republican.

Griffin said he expects the proposal to receive a sympathetic response from the Nixon administration, but emphasized he was making the proposal as a senator—not as assistant Republican leader.

"I would suggest that the prisoners be released well before Tet, the Vietnamese New Year, which comes at the end of January," he said.

"I believe it is appropriate, as the holiday season approaches, for our side to demonstrate through this dramatic and moving gesture our deep conviction, expressed by President Nixon, that all prisoners of war have suffered too much."

Griffin conferred last month with Mai Van Bo of the North Vietnamese Paris delegation in an effort to secure better treatment of American POWs and a list of their names. However, he said he has received no response from Bo.

About 1,500 men are listed as missing in action in Southeast Asia. Pentagon officials say 459 Americans are believed held captive by the North Vietnamese.

The South Vietnamese hold an estimated 8,200 North Vietnamese prisoners.

Griffin said the United States "should ask an impartial organization, like the International Red Cross, to interview the North Vietnamese and determine which men wish to return.

"I do not advocate forced repatriation," he said.

Safer Cars Help Cut Road Deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — In part because cars are safer, the nation's highway death toll will drop by 1,100 in 1970 and perhaps by 3,900 next year, says the government's auto safety chief.

"We're seeing the first significant drop in traffic fatalities since 1957," said Douglas W. Toms, director of the Transportation Department's national highway safety bureau. "Several factors account for it and auto improvements appear to be a major one."

Government statistics for the first eleven months and estimates for December place the 1970 death toll at 55,300, two per cent less than 1969, Toms said in an interview.

"I'm shooting for a seven per cent reduction in 1971 over 1970," he said. "That's a super-tough goal because the statisticians say we can't achieve that much."

Why the drop when American are driving more miles each year at higher speeds?

"Better roads, tougher driver licensing, programs aimed at curbing the alcoholic driver, and better driving habits are part of it," Toms said, "but safer equipment has a definite effect."

He mentioned particularly these safety changes stimulated in part by consumer advocate Ralph Nader and the 1966 Highway Safety Act, lap - belts, energy-absorbing steering columns, penetration-resistant windshield and padded interior.

Toms said the improved fatality figures will not mean easing pressure on automakers for additional improvement, such as the air bag crash-protection system.

"If anything I've been guilty of pushing Detroit," he said. "I have no intention of taking the heat off."

Court-Martial Rumored in Defector Case

Military Remains Silent on Report of Pending Discipline

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Herald Traveler reported today that a Coast Guard board of inquiry in Washington has recommended court-martialing "at least one high-ranking Coast Guard officer" in connection with the attempted defection of a Lithuanian seaman from a Soviet fishing vessel to a Coast Guard cutter last month.

The newspaper also quoted an unnamed source as saying that Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe, under whose jurisdiction the Coast Guard falls, had forwarded the findings to President Nixon.

The source said neither the Transportation Department nor the White House would say when the report would be made public or whether action would be taken on it.

No Recommendation

A department spokesman in Washington, however, said a board of review which has the inquiry under consideration has not made any recommendation.

The board report, which includes testimony from 28 persons, was concluded Monday and given to Adm. C. R. Bender, Coast Guard commandant.

The incident occurred off Martha's Vineyard when the Lithuanian, Simas Kudirka, attempted to defect from his ship to the cutter Vigilant while Russian and American representatives were holding a conference on fishing rights. He was eventually taken by the Russians back to the Soviet ship after spending several hours aboard the Vigilant.

Three Coast Guard officers were relieved of duty "without prejudice" during the investigation. They are Rear Adm. William B. Ellis, commander of the 1st Coast Guard District in Boston, Capt. Fletcher W. Brown, 1st District chief of staff, and Cmdr. Ralph W. Eustis, captain of the Vigilant.

The board of inquiry held 10 days of hearings in Boston and Washington behind closed doors.

250 Thought Dead In Ferry Sinking

SEOUL (AP) — More than 250 South Koreans were feared drowned today in the sinking of a ferryboat in the Korea Strait.

The Namyung Ho, with 256 passengers and 20 crewmen aboard, went down on its 14-hour run between Cheju Island, south of the Korean peninsula, and the southern Korean port of Pusan.

Japanese ships picked up eight survivors, and a Korean police patrol boat picked up three others. A Korean fishing vessel reported picking up a 12th survivor who was taken to a hospital in Pusan.

A Korean police plane reported sighting two persons clinging to debris, and a Korean police officer who flew over the area said he saw oil slicks and floating wood.

Rescue Delayed

Maritime authorities said they feared most of the boat's occupants had perished, however, because the rescue operation was delayed and the weather was very cold.

Transportation Ministry officials said they believed the boat sank because she was overloaded. In addition to the 276 persons aboard, they said, the 263-ton vessel carried about 250 tons of cargo.

Police said a preliminary investigation indicated that the ship had also left Cheju Island without the skipper aboard.

The ferry went down between 1:30 and 8 a.m., but Korean authorities were not aware of the sinking until around noon, when they heard news dispatches from Japan quoting Japan's Maritime Safety Agency. The agency's office in Kitakyushu, southern Japan, said it learned of the sinking from radio messages from other ships in the area.

The Japanese agency assigned four of its patrol vessels to help Korean boats and planes in the search. Several Japanese fishing boats also joined the operation. The U.S. Air Force sent two C130 rescue planes from Yokota Air Base in Japan and a helicopter from Osan Air Base near Seoul.

Police said the ferry passengers included many merchants on their way to Pusan and some tourists returning to the mainland said the weather was very calm, with only two-foot waves. The water was some 250 feet deep where the boat went down.

At least eight Korean ferryboat sinkings resulting in losses of lives have been reported in the past 20 years. The worst was in January 1953, when the Changkyung Ho sank and 330 persons drowned.

The most disastrous postwar Japanese ferry sinking was in September 1954, when a 4,337-ton ship sank in a typhoon off Hakodate, in northern Japan, with a loss of 1,712 lives.

House Challenges Courts With Order on Speaker List

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has ordered public distribution of a revised report on campus "radical orators"—and prohibited a federal judge or anyone else from interfering.

A formal House resolution, which some observers said could tip off an unprecedented constitutional battle between Congress and federal courts, was passed Monday 302-54.

The measure bars anyone, including U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell who enjoined official publication of the original report, from blocking the new one, which is essentially the same.

The House Internal Security Committee says 57 members or supporters of revolutionary, radical or Communist organizations were paid $102,668 for 142 campus speeches. Chairman Richard H. Ichord, D-Mo., said some of the speakers "promote violence and destruction."

Congress Power

Ichord called Gesell's order the first court suppression of an official legislative report in English or American history and said the House resolution would "assert, demand and insist" on Congress' constitutional power over its own affairs.

He said he has never considered the report itself to have the same "earthshaking significance" he attributes to Gesell's order.

Opponents, including Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said the aim of the report is "to stultify campus discussion" by blacklisting the speakers and backed Gesell's ruling that it thus violates the speaker' constitutional free speech rights.

Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill., said the House resolution could force "a disastrous confrontation between the courts and Congress that statesmen have been trying to avoid for 200 years."

Ichord replied the purpose of putting out a new report rather than legislating against interference with the old one was to avoid just that.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which won Gesell's order against the original report, said it had not decided whether to press a confrontation by asking the courts to prohibit publication of the new report as well.

"At this point, we plan no precipitous action," said ACLU's Washington director Lawrence Speiser. "Congress engaged in a flurry of ill-considered actions today and I just don't know what the impact on the case will be."

U.S. Public Printer A.N. Spence, enjoined by Gesell's order from publishing the original report, said he is an employe of Congress, not the courts, and will publish the new report.

"I do what my boss tells me to do," Spence said. "It's as simple as that."

GNP Reaches $1 Trillion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saddled by inflation and spurred by a fast-paced growth over the last decade, the nation's economy reached a $1-trillion rate today.

The official estimate for the exact moment was noon EST, with President Nixon marking the occasion by unveiling a new Gross National Product clock that ticks off the estimated GNP rate minute by minute.

The President, however, was only commemorating an annual rate of growth in the GNP, which measures the nation's output of goods and services in terms of current dollars.

The money GNP has doubled in the last 10 years, whereas in pre-World War days it took an average of 25 years for the money output to double.

But the money GNP is deceiving.

While real output has stepped up markedly since the early 1950s, so has inflation. Prices have increased by about 50 per cent in that time.

It will be some time before the nation's real output, measured in terms of noninflationary 1958 dollars, will reach the $1-trillion mark.

During the third-quarter period that ended Sept. 30, the "real GNP" moved up to $727.5 billion; growing at the rate of $2.6 billion in that quarter. However, the money GNP—figured in current dollars—grew at the rate of $15 billion in the same period, to $985 billion. Part of that was attributable to inflation.

Thus, the new GNP clock will not only tick off the nation's output, it will mark any continuing inflation—minute by minute.

Dat Was Just A Hoax, Folks

RAMSGATE, England — Dat wasn't a Dat after all.

A pet store owner who claimed he had produced "dats" by mating a dog and a cat has admitted it was all a hoax.

The story got started when Roy Tutt placed an ad in a newspaper stating: "Half cat — half dog. Offers invited." When newsmen arrived he insisted that the strange-looking animals were a cross between a cat and a dog.

Tutt admitted the animals were "nothing more than mongrel puppies which cost me 60 cents each."

Seaborg Named To Science Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, has been named the new president of The American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Seaborg's election by the AAAS board of directors came in the wake of controversy over whether the man who heads a large government agency should head an independent organization. Questions had also been raised about his appointment because of what Science magazine said is an identification in the public mind of the agency with pollution and nuclear bombs.

Science magazine is the official weekly of the 130,000-member association.

Nixon Hopes to Quiet Democrats With Connally Appointment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has tapped former Texas Gov. John B. Connally as his new Treasury secretary in what is seen as a political move to blunt Democratic criticism of the administration's economic policies.

With the economy looming as a major issue in the 1972 presidential campaign, Nixon coupled announcement of Connally's appointment Monday with a call for a bipartisan approach to the nation's economic troubles.

A conservative Democrat and three-time governor of Texas, Connally brings a political and legal background to the Treasury job, normally filled by bankers, and gives the administration a stronger voice in dealing with Congress.

Ambassador-at-Large

David M. Kennedy, the 65-year-old Chicago banker who held the Treasury post for two years, resigned effective Feb. 1 to make room for Connally. Nixon named Kennedy an ambassador-at-large in the State Department, with Cabinet seat and responsibility in interational finance.

Administration sources said Connally, secretary of the Navy under former President John F. Kennedy, will be counted on to use his political talents in selling Nixon's economic policies to the public and improving the President's relations with a Democratic Congress.

Both were acknowledged weaknesses of Kennedy, who was in disfavor with the administration's economic policymakers and wanted a less demanding job.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana told newsmen he was completely surprised by Connally's selection. But Mansfield said Connally "is a good man" and "I'm sure he will be a good secretary of the treasury."

He declined to criticize the

conservative Connally and said Senate Democrats have always been willing to cooperate with the Republican administration on economic issues.

But whether Nixon achieved a political coup in naming Connally remains to be seen. At Sun Valley, Idaho, where Republican governors are meeting, the reaction was largely unhappy.

"It was just incredible," Gov. Francis Sargent of Massachusetts said. "Can he add? I don't mind him appointing a Democrat—but Connally?"

"I thought there were a lot of unemployed Republican governors who could have been appointed instead of an unemployed Democratic governor," said lame-duck Gov. David F. Cargo of New Mexico. "I suspect it was a political appointment and that may be the understatement of the year."

Gov. John A. Love of Colorado said, "I don't understand going to a bipartisan approach all of a sudden."

In Texas, the appointment was seen as a possible political reward for Connally's help in defeating Sen. Ralph Yarborough, a liberal, in the Democratic primary, and as a move to build votes for GOP candidates in Texas.

Yarborough said Connally got the job "to reward the party faithful." And the state's Republican national committeeman, Peter O'Donnell, said it assures Nixon of carrying Texas in 1972, and carrying GOP Sen. John Tower in with him.

Paul Samuelson, Nobel prize-winning economist, called the appointment "surprising in the sense that Connally is not known to have had a great deal of previous experience in the field of economics and finance."

In general, however, the financial community reacted favorably to Connally's appointment.

Banker's Thoughts

New York banker Gabriel Hauge, once mentioned as a possible Kennedy successor, said he doesn't think the appointment indicates any change in administration fiscal and monetary policies.

"One can only speculate that the President wants to strengthen his capability in his fiscal relations with Congress," Hauge said.

With economic policymaking largely centered in the White House, the Treasury job has become mainly a figurehead position under Nixon.

But the post can be important in relations with Congress, and in improving the administration's economic image.

Sen. Tower said Connally is "philosophically attuned" to the President and "singularly qualified for this post."

"I'm told," a Treasury spokesman said, "that he has all the abilities of Lyndon Johnson with the drawbacks removed."

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said he hopes Connally "will face forthrightly the need to use moral suasion to require big banks and big business to operate in the public interest."

LBJ Associate

"At a minimum," Patman added, "I hope that the appointee, who is a close associate of former President Johnson, will put an end to Nixon administration efforts to blame prior administrations for the nation's economic ills."

During the 1970 elections, the Nixon administration blamed the nation's economic troubles on past policies of the Democrats.

With unemployment high and inflation continuing, Democrats effectively used the economy issue in several states.

After the election, Kennedy went to Nixon and offered himself as a scapegoat for the failure of the economy and its impact on the election.

Nixon replied he had no one else in mind for the post, a Treasury spokesman said, and Kennedy left for an 11-day European tour while White House sources leaked out the word he would be the next Cabinet member to go.

Rams' Title Chances Dimmed

Lions Keep Playoff Hopes Alive With 28-23 Triumph

By BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"We'll just have to get ready for the New York Giants Sunday—and hope Oakland defeats the San Francisco 49ers."

Coach George Allen of the Rams had this observation today following their 28-23 loss to the Detroit Lions on Monday night.

The Rams are at New York Sunday and the 49ers are at Oakland as the NFL regular season campaign goes down to the wire.

The Lions, having devoured successively San Francisco, Oakland, St. Louis and now the Rams, dropped Los Angeles a game behind San Francisco—8-4-1 to the 49ers 9-3-1—in the National Conference West.

Coach Joe Schmidt's Motor City wreckers kept themselves alive in the National Conference Central with 9-4-0 and a chance to make the playoffs. They host Green Bay Sunday.

The largest Ram turnout of the year, 79,441, packed Memorial Coliseum to see their heroes go down in the nationally televised contest.

It wasn't as close as the score indicates. Quarterback Greg Landry skillfully directed a well-balanced offense and the defense checked the Rams on two field goals through three quarters.

Roman Gabriel and the Rams came to life in the final period and threatened with 17 points.

With 3:07 remaining and trailing 21-16, Los Angeles launched a rally from its own 17. It ended abruptly when middle linebacker Mike Lucci intercepted a Gabriel pass and ran it back 12 yards.

Three plays later, following a 22-yard keeper scamper by Landry, Steve Owens, the 1969 Heisman Trophy winner, went in from the four to sew it up, 28-16.

Los Angeles did travel back 66 yards for a touchdown but at that stage it was meaningless.

The Ram coach blamed a tripping penalty called on the Rams as the key mishap. On fourth and three, Detroit had to punt from its own 25. The penalty not only advanced the ball to the Lion 40 but cost the Rams badly needed possession of the ball midway through the final quarter.

Owens got his chance when regular running back Mel Farr was injured on his second carry of the young game—15 yards—and went to the pits with a shoulder dislocation.

Schmidt said later he didn't know how long Farr would be sidelined.

Owens was more than adequate. He scored two touchdowns and gained 66 yards—which was 19 yards more than the entire Ram rushing output.

Gabriel gained 323 yards via the air and threw two touchdown passes. It was the most yards Gabe had ever gained but it went for nothing.

UCLA Continues To Dominate AP College Rankings

By KEN RAPPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

One, two ... they're still doing the Rankings Shuffle with UCLA at the head of the line.

But college basketball teams just moved a couple of steps today among the Top Ten and a few put their best foot forward in the rest of the bunch.

The same faces appear in the Top Ten, headed by UCLA's indomitable Bruins, No. 1 with 33 first place votes and 712 points from sports writers and broadcasters around the country.

South Carolina, same as last week, is No. 2. The Gamecocks polled four first place ballots and 650 points—62 behind the front-runners. Last week, UCLA led by 52.

Spreadeagled

The top five spreadeagled the rest of the field. Penn picked up two places for sixth with 286 points, Notre Dame dropped one to seventh, with 283, and Southern California moved up a spot to eighth with 258.

Drake, No. 7 last week, skidded to No. 9 with 257 points and Villanova remained 10th with 192.

Incredible UCLA beat U. of Pacific 100-88 and Tulane 95-75 last week to win its 124th game in the last 128.

But are the Bruins satisfied?

"The press isn't as good as we had hoped for," UCLA assistant Coach Gary Cunningham told a basketball luncheon Monday. "We can't yet contain men in the backcourt. But we'll keep working on it."

Nobody's perfect, he insisted.

The Top Twenty, with first place votes in parentheses, won lost records for games through Saturday, Dec. 12 and total points on a 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 Basis.

'We Got Out-Hit,' Bengtson Explains After Seeing Film

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — Frequently, in the frenetic world of professional football, victory or defeat hinges upon a single, climactic play.

And, in many instances, a loss can be explained by one or two expensive mistakes.

But such, it can be said with certainty, is not the case with the Packers' 35-17 stunning at the hands of Chicago's supercharged Bears. They were roundly outplayed and Coach Phil Bengston, ever a realist, admitted as much during a Monday analysis based upon a film review of Sunday's proceedings.

"We got out-hit," Bengtson, a block-and-tackle fundamentalist of the Bernie Bierman school, said simply.

Hot Passer

"We hit a hot passer, no question about it," he conceded. "It was the best passing (21 of 34 for 338 yards) that Jack Concannon has ever done in his life. And they were making some great catches — our coverage wasn't that bad, although it was a little loose at times.

"But the big item was they were out-hitting us."

This last was underscored by two stark statistics: Packer passers Bart Starr, Frank Patrick and Rick Norton were smothered nine times for 79 yards in losses while, conversely, Concannon was felled only once for a 2-yard loss.

Bengtson said he could think of no explanation for the Packers' failure to take the initiative.

"Of course," he noted after brief reflection, "the Bears did get off to a real fast start. On their first play of the game, we had a mistake in coverage and they converted it into a 64-yard gain on the pass to Don Shy.

Great Catch

"The actual touchdown (a 15-yard pass to Dick Gordon four plays later) was just a great throw and a great catch ... I don't know how Gordon stayed in bounds."

Shaking his head for emphasis, Bengtson added, "The one Gordon caught later on Bob Jeter for their third touchdown was really a close thing ... Gordon had the ball for a while, but he didn't have it for long (before Jeter knocked it from his hands).

"But that's the kind of break you've got to have working for you in order to win."

Bengtson admitted, in this

Eagles' Defensive Ace Shot

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police spokesmen say they are following "some pretty firm leads" in connection with the shooting of Nate Ramsey, star defensive back for the Philadelphia Eagles

Nate Ramsey

Ramsey, 29, is the National League football team's defensive captain. He was shot Monday afternoon as he walked toward a West Philadelphia tavern to meet a friend.

Police said there was no connection between the unidentified friend and the leads they were following.

Doctors said the bullet grazed a rib but apparently caused no serious internal damage. However, the player's condition was described as "serious" by a Misericordia Hospital spokesman.

Ramsey's wife, Desiree, weeping on a bench in the hospital emergency room, told newsmen the assailant "was an acquaintance, but I don't know why he did it."

Police Lt. James Lavin said detectives believe Ramsey "might have known" the assailant "from seeing him around." Lavin said Ramsey had been interviewed by police, but that he didn't know why he had been shot.

Many Witnesses

Lavin said there were many witnesses to the shooting, which occurred on a busy street, but that police had not talked to all of them yet.

"There is no indication this was involved with football," Lavin said.

The 6-foot-1 Indiana University graduate, drafted 14th by the Eagles in 1963, led the team in pass interceptions in 1964 and 1965 and had a career total of 18. He is a native of Neptune, N. J.

NCAA Bans Dunk Shots In Warmups

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The dunk shot has been outlawed not only in NCAA sanctioned basketball games but in pre-game warmup sessions.

Spokesmen for the NCAA have announced that to insure enforcement, game officials have been given jurisdiction beginning 30 minutes prior to game time. If the officials see a dunk shot in the warmup they have authority to call a technical foul on the player.

The dunk shot is defined by the NCAA as reaching above the rim to put the ball through the basket.

Another new rule in effect this season eliminates the practice of non-jumpers dodging from one position to another during a jump ball.

Fox Cities prep cage teams collectively enjoyed their most successful weekend of the season, chalking up a record of 12 victories against six setbacks.

Biggest gains were made by standings leader Neenah (6-0), Little Chute (6-1) and Appleton West (5-1), all of which won two outings. The twin triumphs by the Rockets and Terrors give both clubs momentum going into their state tournament rematch at the West gym Friday night.

Notching single wins were Kaukauna (5-2), St. John (4-5) and Xavier (2-4), while Fox Valley Lutheran (3-4), Kimberly (4-4) and Menasha (2-5) all split two decisions. On the debit side, St. Mary (1-5) dropped its only contest, and Appleton East (3-3) absorbed a pair of defeats.

Although many of the teams' top stars came through with their usual high-scoring performances, there were several new faces in the spotlight as lesser-known players had their best point productions to date.

Takes Up Slack

For example, Little Chute's Gary Van Handel took up the slack left by the injured Steve Mollen and tossed in 20 points, aiding the mustangs' 78-53 romp over Wautoma Saturday night. In six previous games, Hackel had averaged just over 11 points.

Dick Hackel led the Chuters against Wautoma with 29 markers, the individual high for Fox Cities performers over the weekend. Bob VandeHey fired through 12 points the night before as the Mustangs riddled Shiocton, 92-59.

St. John toppled Marinette Catholic Central, 56-51, as Steve Siebers paced the Dutchmen with 16 points. Prior to the Friday night tilt, Siebers had managed 9.5 points per game. Tom Jansen also hit his peak, contributing nine points to the win.

Kimberly outlasted East, 64-58, in overtime Saturday night, and a big reason for the Papermaker triumph was the 20-point effort by Stan Swokowski. Swokowski's former high was 11 points against Appleton West, and his average before facing the Patriots was only 4.1 points per game.

Neenah had easy times with Marinette, 87-35, and Oshkosh, 82-59, and Ed Hawley's 14 points against the Indians was his season maximum.

Appleton West raced away from Menasha in the second half for an 86-64 conquest Saturday night, and three Terrors and two Bluejays came up with superior scoring efforts. West's Tim Moriarty collected 19 points, while teammates Rick Luebben and Dwight Mueller hit nine and seven, respectively. Menasha got eclipsing performances from Chris Speidel (19 points) and Tom Bohmke (16).

Kaukauna put down Kimberly, 74-69, as Karl Mueller hit his top of 15 points, thus lending valuable support to the 1-2 scoring punch of Leon Franzke (26 points) and Al Borchardt (22).

NOTES and NOTIONS

John L. Faustin

In a vast majority of cases, closing games in pro sports seasons (whether it be baseball, football, basketball or hockey), are pretty much of a bore — with almost everything of significance having been decided days or weeks before. The 1970 National Football League campaign is a dramatic exception. Pete Rozelle and his fellow administrators could be excused if they indulged in a mutual back - slapping exercise, for they seem to have come as close to achieving balance and down-to-the-wite suspense with the new divisional set-up and playoff system as it's possible to get. With only one weekend of regular-season play remaining, consider these astounding facts: (1) 13 of the 26 teams are still in the running for playoff berths; (2) Three of the six division titles are unsettled; and (3) Nine of the 13 games on the final weekend's docket will have a direct bearing on the ultimate playoff pairings.

Only three teams — Minnesota, Baltimore and Oakland — are sure of participating in the playoffs . . . and they have been solidly consistent most of the way. The other five playoff berths are still up for grabs.

Is it a greater surprise that Kansas City probably won't be in the playoffs or that Cincinnati probably will be. In last summer's speculation, the Chiefs were almost universally and automatically penciled in as a sure playoff contestant with the other seven berths to be decided the hard way. Now it will take a mini-miracle (a combination of a Buffalo win over Miami and a Chiefs' win over San Diego) to provide a last-minute reprieve. The Bengals, 1-6 at the season's midpoint, have won six straight, to take the dominant position in AFC Central and need only a win over lowly and visting Boston to wrap it up. Along with Cincinnati, Miami and Dallas were also pretty much written off during mid-season slumps that brought boos from their own partisans and cheers from other division contenders. But the Dolphins and the Cowboys have both made notable comebacks. St. Louis, on the other hand, seemed almost a cinch, with a 1½-game lead two weeks ago . . . Now the Cards need plenty of help to make the playoffs.

Kansas City invincibility may not be the only myth due for explosion. For a long time, most pro football fans have accepted as fact the belief that "No team will ever win a title with Fran Tarkenton as its quarterback." Well, the 1970 Giants are closer to disproving this contention than any previous "Tark"-led team. New York has a sizable task ahead in facing the Rams next Sunday, but after it won the "must" game against St. Louis, no one is quite that sure any more that Tarkenton is a "non-winner."

Things are so tight in the NFL, that even the "Jim Plunkett derby" is going down to the final weekend. Three teams — Boston, New Orleans and Philadelphia — are still in "contention" for the worst-record distinction that would give that club first pick in the 1971 draft. Pittsburgh, which won the "Terry Bradshaw sweepstakes" last year, is no longer in the running. Nor is Buffalo, which won the "O. J. Simpson derby" two years ago.

Last Sunday — when the Packers proved most gracious guests of the Bears in Chicago — is a date Packerland fans will try to forget in a hurry . . . along with Thanksgiving Day in Dallas and opening day against Detroit. It was a day of "on the job" training for new Packer QBs. Because of another unfortunate injury to Bart Starr, the Bays had no choice but to go with apprentice Frank Patrick and new - to - the - Packer-system Rick Norton. The some-times calamitous results were rather predictable, since the Bear rush—can, on occasion, be as good as any in football.

The biggest Packer disappointment was the play of the secondary. Jack Concannon, for the most part, made Green Bay's pass defenders look like novices. Seldom have they been burned so consistently.

Starr's loss, obviously, was a hard blow for the offensive unit, but why the defensive unit should have been that inept is difficult to fathom. Patrick gave it a good whirl, considering his total lack of previous game experience. Rick Norton, in his comparatively brief appearance, was quite impressive, and it wouldn't be too surprising to see him used more extensively in the finale at Detroit.

Our season's average dipped another fraction (to 723) after last week's forecasts proved only 66 and ⅔rds per cent right (eight hits, four misses and one tie). The overall record now is 293-112-15. The NFL's final full schedule of games looks this way from this angle: Lions over Packers, Vikings over Falcons, Chiefs over Chargers, Cowboys over Oilers, Dolphins over Bills, Bears over Saints, Browns over Broncos, Eagles over Steelers, Colts over Jets, Bengals over Patriots, Cardinals over Redskins, Giants over Rams, Raiders over 49ers.

Packers Were Out-Hit, Says Bengtson

connection, that the early loss of left cornerback Ken Ellis with a leg injury "taxed our secondary people quite a bit . . . Of course, they went right after Al Matthews when he replaced Ellis.

"Al didn't do badly, actually, but he was playing a little loose because he was afraid of getting beat deep and the ball was being thrown perfectly."

Addressing himself to the Pack's pass protection inadequacy, Bengtson said, "There again, they just overpowered us.

"It wasnt' the linebackers so much on the blitz who were responsible. That (Willie) Holman had a helluva day . . . I think he got the quarterback three or four times."

This prompted the Packer headmaster to dryly append, "I noticed that when they had their second string quarterback in there (Kent Nix) they had their pass protection troubles, too."

The fact that the Bears charged to a quick 14-0 lead also complicated matters for the Pack's offensive line, he pointed out.

Not Much Gamble

"When a team gets ahead, it's not much of a gamble to rush like they did They know you have to throw, that you have to play catchup, and they can afford to be reckless

"I'm sure the loss of Bart Starr late in the first quarter also hurt us psychologically as well as physically. When you're that far behind and you lose your quarterback. . ."

Appraising the performance of rookie Frank Patrick in the light of his film study, Bengtson said, "Patrick had his problems, but his lack of protection certainly didn't help him any."

Rick Norton, who relieved Patrick late in the fourth quarter, had performed more acceptably under the circumstances than he had expected, he said.

Liked Norton

"I liked what I saw of Norton. I think he's got some possibilities. With his limited experience with us, he did pretty well. He had good poise which, of course, you expect of somebody with experience

"But his experience with us has been limited and he did pick out the open man (tight end John Hilton) on that touchdown."

Bengtson also was encouraged by the play of sophomore guard Dave Bradley, who made his first regular season appearance from scrimmage against the Bears.

"We were satisfied that Bradley did all right," he said. "You could almost say he'd never played before Sunday.

Nothing Wrong

"There was nothing wrong with Lueck," Bengtson assured "We just felt we had to get a look at Bradley and this was the first chance we had to do it"

Looking to Sunday's season finale, which the Packers must win to emerge a 500 record, Bengtson said, perhaps a trifle wistfully, "If we could finish against the Lions like we did the last two years against the Bears (28-27 in 1968) and against the Cardinals (45-27 in '69), we'll be all right."

PACKER PATTER — Bart Starr reported Monday that he had fully recovered from the effects of Dick Butkus's tender ministrations in the first quarter of Sunday's game.

"I feel fine now," Mr. Quarterback said.

He still was a little unhappy, however, over the theft of his duffel bag from the Packers' Wrigley Field dressing room Sunday afternoon, presumably by a souvenir hunter.

It contained, among other items, rib and shoulder pads which had been specially designed for him. "Those rib pads," a chagrined Trainer Domenic Gentile reported, "aren't being made any more."

As a result, Gentile will have to improvise a new apparatus to protect Starr's ribs for Sunday's closeout at Detroit

Three pair of football shoes, one just acquired late last week specifically for possible use in Chicago, and Starr's helmet also were among approximately $250 worth of equipment in the bag.

"Whoever it was even stole Rick Norton's No. 11 jersey," Property Manager Dad Braisher indignantly announced as he began the task of assembling new gear for Mr. Quarterback. "It was laying right next to Bart's bag."

"The one who took the stuff was a well dressed man, we understand. He walked away with the bag right in front of a security guard. Apparently he passed himself off as a reporter because he needed a pass to get past the guards" year, broke out of an early-season slump by tallying 19 points to guide the Hawks over Kenosha Bradford, 71-55. Entering the non-league contest, Collar had been hitting at an 8.4 clip.

Glen Hinnenthal gave Fox Valley Lutheran a lift as the Foxes downed Milwaukee Lutheran, 48-44. The 6-3½ junior scored seven points, four more than he had netted for the season in former relief roles.

St. Mary lost its fifth game in six starts to Fond du Lac Springs, 77-70, but bright spots for the Zephyrs were Terry Winarski and Tom Verbrick who notched personal highs of 16 and 13 points, respectively.

None of Appleton East's players hit high-water marks for scoring as the Patriots fell before West, 70-56, and Kimberly, 64-58, in overtime. Nick Milhaupt's 19 points bossed his team against the Papermakers, but the senior forward earlier had a 22-point night against Milwaukee North.

Xavier's Tim O'Dell tailed off somewhat from his former torrid pace, settling for an 18-point effort against Bradford.

Little Chute's Steve Mollen is still second at 22.3, followed by Kaukauna's Leon Franzke (21.8), West's Rich Reitzner (19.7), and Little Chute's Dick Hackel (19.4).

PGA Schedules Match Play Test For Next August

NEW YORK (AP) — After a hiatus of 14 years, the Professional Golfers Association has returned a match play championship to its tournament trail.

The National Match Play Championship will be played over the 6,973-yard Country Club of North Carolina course at Pinehurst next August with a $32,000 first prize awaiting the winner.

The $200,000 five-day event—first match play tourney scheduled by the PGA since 1957—will also carry a minimum purse of $1,250 for players eliminated in the first day of competition.

Some 64 top ranking pros will compete with the championship field including winners of major PGA-sanctioned tournaments in the 12 months prior to the event, as well as current PGA tournament point leaders.

The pros will go head-to-head for 18 holes each day in stroke play with the winner determined by low score.

Important to Get Education First

Conservation Career Not All Glamour

By MYRON J. FARIS
Fond du Lac Commonwealth Reporter
For the Associated Press

To the many high school youths who revel in hunting and fishing and who aspire to careers in conservation on the assumption they will have all the time in the world to pursue these activities, a word of advice: Get a college degree first.

One of the most rewarding experiences a person can have is a lifetime job in the broad field of conservation. The outdoors holds a special attraction for most males and for a growing number of females, and what could be more exciting than the dramatic rescues of wildlife in distress or more appealing than on-the-job hunting and fishing?

But, while there may be glamour and excitement in conservation work at times, more often it is just plain hard work, frequently done under emergency conditions. Any hunting and fishing a conservation worker does get in generally is done on his own time.

Cold Water

On a given day a conservationist can be performing back-breaking work with a pick, shovel or ax; driving a bulldozer or truck; working in cold water with cumbersome seines; using an aqualung and scuba equipment under water, or doing an eye-straining task with a microscope under strong laboratory lights.

Conservation workers also deal with the public, and sometimes under not-too-pleasant circumstances.

In times of emergencies—and there are many because nature is so unpredictable—a conservationist's free time is taken away from him and he rushes back to work to cope with whatever situation arises.

Some youths look on a conservation career as being adventurous. They envision themselves in flashy uniforms, racing down some snowy hill on skis in pursuit of game law violators or plodding a new trail with snowshoes or parachuting from a plane with firefighting equipment on their backs. Such heroics do enter into some careers, but not too often.

Public Service

So, just what does the field of conservation constitute? Generally, it means public service, a business, but mostly a science; in fact, it is a combination of sciences—biology, botany, agronomy, dendrology, ichthyology, to name a few—but especially ecology, which is the relationship of plants and animals to their community.

A career in conservation without college training usually is not too promising. The demand today in most industries is for a person with a college degree, and regardless whether a person with such higher education is more qualified than a college graduate for a specific job, the one with the degree is preferred It's a fact of life.

Competition is stiff when a number of persons are competing for the same job, and an extremely-limited quota of non-technical conservation posts does not provide much hope to the individual who lacks college training. Jobs available to those in the manual labor field include such tasks as cleaning of raceways at trout hatcheries, fighting fires, a few openings on manning fire towers, or driving trucks. Custodial and maintenance work also come under this category.

More Profitable

It would be far more profitable for those without college training to look into other areas of lifetime vocations than to choose conservation.

How can a youth know that a career in conservation is what he really wants?

An intense desire for such work, gained from boyhood and teen-age exposure to the outdoors, is a good indication Genuine enthusiasm for hunting, fishing or trapping, and such pursuits as bird watching or hiking in fields and woods are points in that direction.

But, as in any other field, a preferred way to get started is to become well acquainted with the subject, and reading is a helpful approach.

Form Club

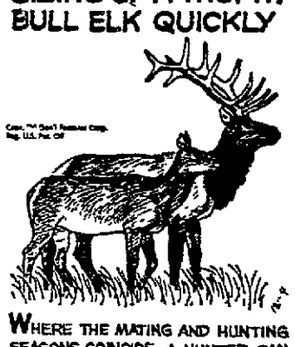

Formation of a conservation club at school is an excellent way for boys and girls to become acquainted with the outdoors and to get special study courses started.

In essence, a primary basis for any conservation career is a good education in both junior and senior high schools.

The challenge for the student is there. The opportunity is his for the taking. If he chooses a conservation career, it can be worthwhile.

SIZING UP A TROPHY BULL ELK QUICKLY

WHERE THE MATING AND HUNTING SEASONS COINCIDE, A HUNTER CAN COMPARE THE SIZE OF THE LARGEST COW (500 TO 600 LBS) IN THE BAND WITH THE BULL; IF BULL SEEMS TO BE ABOUT TWICE HER SIZE, HE'LL WEIGH ABOUT 1,000 LBS. IF HE'S NEARER COW'S SIZE, HE IS LIKELY A YOUNG BULL WITH POOR ANTLERS.

IF TIME ALLOWS, CHECK ANTLERS. A BULL STANDS ABOUT 5' HIGH AT THE TOP OF HIS BACK, SO IF ANTLERS ARE NEAR THIS LENGTH THEY'RE CHOICE! A "ROYAL BULL" HAS 6 POINTS PER ANTLER.

Nervous But Not Scared

'You've Got to Start Somewhere,' Says Patrick After Traumatic Debut

Post-Crescent News Service

CHICAGO — Mopping his face with a towel in the heart of a congested dressing room, Frank Patrick volunteered with surprising equanimity, "You've got to start somewhere, I guess."

The rookie quarterback, who had weathered the best shots of the somewhat sadistic Dick Butkus and friends in relief of injured Bart Starr, did not appear overly chastened by his traumatic experience.

Patrick, smothered six times for 55 yards in his formal pro football debut, said it had hardly come as a surprise. "I more or less expected them to blitz a lot after I went in there," he said.

"I'd be a fool if I said I wasn't nervous when I first went in there, but even veterans are nervous. . .But," Patrick, whose only previous appearance had been a brief fourth quarter stint in a pre-season game at Oakland Aug. 30, sagely reminded, "there's a difference between being nervous and being scared."

Asked if he had been conscious of the Butkus presence, the former University of Nebraska athlete rejoined with a smile, "Butkus is a fine ball player but you just don't think of one man out there."

Patrick, who replaced Starr late in the first quarter when Bart suffered a concussion, admitted, "I got shaken up once myself, but you tend to forget those things. It's hard enough to remember the good things, let alone the bad ones.

"I was just trying to do as good a job as I could — I was trying to do what the coaches wanted me to do. They were sending in the plays from the sidelines and they were trying to have me do the things I do best.

"When you haven't played a position for three years, it makes quite a difference," Patrick, a tight end in his senior year at Nebraska, pointed out.

Attempting to assess his performance, he said, "As far as experience goes, it helped me. As far as anything else is concerned, I'll have to see the films. . .I have to see how many mistakes I made."

Would he have preferred to break in some other time?

"I would have been happy to get a chance last week in Pittsburgh, which is practically my home town — my home is 35 miles southeast of there. . .but I was glad to get in this game."

Fellow quarterback Rick Norton, who also made his Packer bow Sunday and threw a scoring pass to John Hilton in the final minutes, explained, "I think we broke their coverage on that scoring play . .The weak safety must have gone with the primary receiver, who was Carroll Dale, because Hilton was wide open."

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW by John Behnke

Although Johnny Unitas is by far the most famous quarterback who ever played at the University of Louisville, oddly enough, Unitas does not hold any Louisville passing records (except for most interceptions!), and while Unitas played at Louisville from 1951 to 1954, they lost more games than they won!

It seems hard to believe, but did you know that in Bart Starr's senior year at Alabama, in 1955, Alabama's record was no wins and 10 losses.

* * *

The longest and most unusual run anybody ever made for a touchdown in a football game was made by a player named Snokes Dowd of Lehigh who once ran 200 yards for one touchdown! . . . he picked up a fumble on his opponent's 1-yard line and ran in the wrong direction, going all the way down the field to the opposite end zone; realizing his mistake, he circled around in the end zone and started upfield, and went all the way into the other end zone for a TD!

Color Scheme of Uniforms

White Sox Add Red, Blue to

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox, continuing their blueprint for a change of image, will be decked out in red, white and blue uniforms next baseball season.

The home gear will be red and white, with red, white and blue on the road.

They also will wear white shoes with a red stripe.

"I just hope the ball players are as colorful as our new uniforms," said Sox General Manager Stu Holcomb.

Owner Charlie Finley of Oakland A's, who pioneered multicolored uniforms, said "everybody used to think I was kooky, but I'm glad to see some other people in baseball are beginning to wake up."

The Philadelphia Phillies, who will be moving into a new park, already have announced they will be wearing red shoes. The Boston Red Sox are said to be thinking of white shoes with a red stripe.

Witness in Probe

NFL Has 'Stranglehold' On Players, Declares Former Jet Sample

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — A federal grand jury investigation into possible antitrust violations in the National Football League continues today following testimony from retired all-pro defensive back John Sample.

Sample told newsmen after appearing before the jury Monday that if anyone is indicted, it should be NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. He said he told the jury of alleged blackballing practices, racial discrimination and the league's "stranglehold" on players.

Sample said he thought New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath should be called before the jury in regard to the selling of his Bachelor's Three night spot last year, saying, "I think he (Namath) will be very helpful if he is called in."

Sample said he "talked a little" to the jury about the sale and said, "He (Namath) didn't do anything wrong and they didn't have evidence he did anything wrong." Sample charged that Rozelle told Namath to "sell out or not play football any more."

"The control they (Rozelle and owners) think they have over them (players) puts fear in the ball players," Sample said.

Sample, who retired from the New York Jets after the 1969 College All-Star game because of a back injury, said "blackballing was 50 per cent" of the subject of the jury's questions to him and that he thought the jury's probe was headed in the direction of blackballing.

Sample called blackballing "a violation" of a player's constitutional rights. He said he knows he was blackballed from the NFL after the 1965 season with the Washington Redskins "cause I was told."

He also maintained that there was still discrimination in the form of "quota system," in which some clubs limit the number of blacks on the roster.

The 33-year-old restaurateur and ticket agency owner in Philadelphia said he thinks the jury is probing "all 26 teams in the NFL today," not just the affairs of the older National Football League teams.

Despite his beliefs of NFL wrongdoing. Sample said, "I don't think anyone should go to jail because of this."

Sample played with Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Washington before switching to the Jets in 1966. He is the only pro player who has been all-league and on championship teams in both leagues.

Owens Voted Game Ball for Relief Duty

Heisman Winner Gets 1st Extended Action for Detroit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It was a tragedy to lose Mel Farr, but Steve Owens gives us a very good threat inside."

Detroit quarterback Greg Landry said it and Owens, the rookie running back from Oklahoma who won the Heisman Trophy in 1969, provided proof on Monday night in the 28-23 victory over Los Angeles.

Not much had been heard from Owens who underwent surgery for a shoulder separation suffered in the final exhibition game of the National Football League campaign.

He still wears a steel pin in his left shoulder and he had carried the ball only seven times in league play until Monday night.

On the Lions' first touchdown drive, Farr suffered a dislocated shoulder and Owens came on in relief. He carried the ball 17 times for 66 yards and two touchdowns on runs of six and four yards. He also caught three of Landry's passes for 19 additional yards.

First Chance

"It was the first time he had a chance to run this year and he proved he deserved that Heisman Trophy and that we did right in making him our No. 1 draft pick," said Detroit Coach Joe Schmidt.

There had been some criticism that Owens wasn't fast enough to make good as a pro.

With Farr probably out at least three weeks, Owens will carry a big load in the waning days of the NFL campaign, one in which the Lions remain a possibility for a playoff berth.

For his play against the Rams, the 225-pound Owens was voted the game ball by his teammates.

"That was a great honor," he said quietly. "It was a big load for me when Mel was hurt. Even in the exhibitions, I had played only half of the games. Now I had to play nearly a full game against one of the best teams in pro ball."

Twinges of Pain

There is still a red scar on Owens' shoulder and he gets twinges of pain when the temperature changes—"not when I'm hit in a game.

"Mel is one ofthe best backs that I've ever seen," continued Owens. "If he can't play and if I'm needed, I'll be in there."

Asked if he had given any thought to the so-called Heisman jinx—a player voted best of the collegians but a professional flop—Owens said he didn't believe in it.

"The award is given to college player for what he did in college," he replied. "Some make it in the pros and some don't. It was a great honor for me to receive."

Coach Schmidt summed up the Owens-pro situation when he said, "Steve isn't a breakaway runner. But he's powerful, picks his holes well, and is a good blocker. Yes, he proved out there his right to the Heisman."

Seaver Tops In Strikeouts, Had Best ERA

Gaylord Perry, Bob Gibson Hurled, 23 Victories Each

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Although the New York Mets dropped in the standings in 1970, pitcher Tom Seaver led the National League in both strikeouts and earned run averages, official league statistics showed today.

Seaver's 2.81 ERA beat a mark of 3.02 by Wayne Simpson of the league champion Cincinnati Redlegs.

Seaver's 283 strikeouts topped Ferguson Jenkins of Chicago and Bob Gibson of St. Louis, with 274 each.

The New Yorker tied a major league record with 19 strikeouts in one game against San Diego April 22. He set another record in the same game by fanning 10 consecutive men.

Finished Third

The Mets, world champions in 1969, were third in the National League East last season.

Tying for the most victories in official pitching statistics released today were Gibson, 23-7 and Gaylord Perry of San Francisco, 23-13.

Simpson had the best winning average, however, at .824, with a 14-3 mark.

Perry hurled the most shutouts, five; had the most starts, 41; the most innings pitched, 329; allowed the most hits, 292, and yielded the most runs, 138.

Jenkins pitched the most complete games, 24, and tied with Don Sutton of Los Angeles for the most earned runs allowed, 118.

Gibson and Simpson each had 10-game winning streaks, the longest in the league.

Brusky Persuades Packer Veteran To Leave Game

Post-Crescent News Service

CHICAGO — "I had to call a timeout . . . Bart was almost falling out of the huddle — his knees were buckling under him."

The speaker was Gale Gillingham, Packer offensive captain, who was explaining how quarterback Bart Starr had left Sunday's Bear struggle under protest, despite a concussion.

"He's a great competitor and he wanted to stay in." Gillie said, "but when I saw his knees buckle, I said to myself 'This man isn't right.' I called timeout and he told me he was having trouble remembering the plays. So we called Dr. E. S. Brusky out to try to get him to go out."

Dr. Brusky eventually was successful in persuading Starr to leave but, he admitted with a smile Sunday night, 'Bart didn't want to go . . . He kept saying 'Let me alone.' And I kept saying, 'You're coming out.'

"He was a little confused and when a player is in that condition, he will be fair game. You can't afford to take any chances.

"When he first got hurt, Bart went right back in when we got the ball back without saying anything to anyone. But then, of course, he couldn't remember the plays and Gillie called timeout.

"After we got him out of there, he kept trying to get me to let him go back in," Dr. Brusky said. "And he was pretty crafty about it . . . He didn't ask any questions that might lead me to think he wasn't all right.

"Usually, a player with a concussion will ask, 'What's the score? or 'What quarter is it?' But Bart didn't — he wanted to get back in there."

Outfielder In Winter Loop Drowns

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Herman Hill, a 25-year-old outfielder, drowned while swimming at Valencia, 100 miles east of here, Monday.

Hill, who was traded by Minnesota to the St. Louis Cardinals last month, had been playing winter league baseball with the Valencia Magallanes.

He was pulled out to sea by a large wave and police reported his body was recovered several hours later.

Hill spent last season playing in the Minnesota farm system. He batted .091 in 27 games with the Twins late in the season and then was traded to St. Louis in a deal that also sent outfielder Chuck Wissler to the Cardinals and brought pitcher Sal Campisi and infielder Jim Kennedy to Minnesota.

Bill Hartack Injured, Wins 4,000th Test

MIAMI (AP) — Not even a collision with the starting gate could keep jockey Bill Hartack from his 4,000th victory. Hartack ignored his injured side and brought Roart from last to first place at Tropical Park before tumbling from the saddle after the finish.

The victory Monday made the controversial 38-year-old jockey the fifth American in racing history to pass the 4,000 mark.

Hartack, who rode his first winner at Waterford Park in 1952, bruised his side and leg when Roart banged him into the gate at the start of the six furlong seventh race.

He urged the horse past everything on the homestretch, then was thrown as his side knotted up with pain after he passed under the wire.

America's other 4,000-winner jockeys are Bill Shoemaker, 6,067; Johnny Longden, 6,026; Eddie Arcaro, 4,779, and Steve Brooks, 4,447.

Confusion Reigns Going Into Final Weekend

3 Titles Decided, 10 Teams in Running for NFL Playoff Spots

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brother, can you spare a dime? Or whatever kind of coin Pete Rozelle wants to flip to settle the National Football League's playoff picture.

What hath Rozelle wrought? A state of confusion in which a coin flip could send a team to the sidelines while the winner of the toss goes after the $25,000-a-man Super Bowl plum.

Only three teams—Minnesota in the National Conference Central, Baltimore in the American East and Oakland in the American West—have clinched their division titles. The other five playoff participants will be decided Sunday . . . or will they?

The simplest way of explaining the mess is this: If there is a two-way deadlock either for first place in a division or the best second-place record in a conference, the first tie-breaking formula is the season's games between the two teams involved.

If they broke even or did not play each other, the next step is intradivision records for settling division races and intraconference records for determining the best second-place team. If a comparison of intradivision races still leaves a tie, then intraconference records are used. Finally, comes a coin toss.

Still alive and kicking are the New York Giants and Dallas, both 9-4, and St. Louis, 8-4-1, in the NFC East; Detroit, 9-4, in the NFC Central; San Francisco, 9-3-1, and Los Angeles, 8-4-1, in the NFC West; Miami in the AFC East; Cincinnati, 7-6, and Cleveland, 6-7, in the AFC Central and Kansas City, 7-4-2, in the AFC West.

Nine games Sunday will involve playoff contenders, with the clash in New York between Los Angeles and the Giants the only one matching two pretenders head-to-head. The other key games find Houston at Dallas, St. Louis at Washington, Green Bay at Detroit, San Francisco at Oakland, Buffalo at Miami, Boston at Cincinnati, Cleveland at Denver and Kansas City at San Diego.

Detroit's 28-23 triumph over Los Angeles Monday night boosted the Lions' hopes and dampened those of the Rams, but really did nothing to assure the winners a playoff berth or eliminate the losers.

All it means is that the Rams must win or tie Sunday to have any chance at the Super Bowl.

The Giants would win any two-way tie for first in the NFC East while a St. Louis-Dallas deadlock would go to the Cardinals. The Rams would come out on top in a standoff with San Francisco in the NFC West. In the AFC Central, a Cleveland-Cincinnati tie would go to the Browns.

Victories by the Giants, Cowboys, 49ers, Dolphins and Bengals would—believe it or not—make any tie-breaking formulas unnecessary and put those teams in the playoffs, no matter what the Cards, Lions, Rams, Browns and Chiefs do.

Of course, the possibility exists for a three-way tie for first in the NFC East or second in the over-all NFC, not to mention the numerous two-way possibilities.

Does the loser get to keep the coin, Pete?

Patriot Jayvees Win Over Appleton West, Lose to Kimberly

Appleton East's jayvee basketball team split a pair of games over the weekend, winning over Appleton West, 34-31, Friday night and then losing to Kimberly, 64-42, Saturday night.

In the game against West, the East cagers rallied from a 23-17 halftime deficit for a 27-26 edge at the end of the third period. Dan Heinritz had 10 for the winners, and John Lee matched the total for the losers.

Kimberly roared to a 31-11 halftime bulge in whipping East. Randy Thiel and Lee Reider netted 12 and 10 points, respectively, for the Papermakers, and Jim Vandenberg hit 10 for the Patriots.

East is now 4-2 for the season.

Byrnes Denies Rift With White House

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Like Mark Twain's death, tales of a growing rift between 8th Dist. Rep. John Byrnes of Green Bay and President Nixon are greatly exaggerated, the powerful Republican congressman says.

The rumors cropping up in political columns are based on misinformation and an oversimplification of the essential Byrnes' political philosophy, the veteran lawmaker told The Post-Crescent in an interview here.

But one knowledgeable Republican — in a position to know about such things — says that Nixon's sudden trip to the Bart Starr dinner in Green Bay before the November election came after White House officials "got the shakes" after the first report of a "rift" between Byrnes and Nixon appeared.

True or not, the account gives some indication of the weight that Washington forces from the White House down put on good relations with the veteran Byrnes.

Byrnes says that any minor differences grow out of the fact that he pays first allegiance to fellow House Republicans, especially the political well-being of those who rank behind him on the Ways and Means Committee, the financial arm of the House. Their needs rank ahead of those of the White House for Byrnes when the political chips are down, he says.

As ranking minority party member on the Ways and Means Committee, he is not simply a spokesman for the interests of the national administration but a legislative officer concerned about the good of the Congress, his fellow GOP committee members, and the entire Republican House caucus, he believes.

Byrnes says that he has spurned White House requests for action on some matters of priority for the Nixon administration. But that doesn't mean that there is a rift, he says.

"If what they are basically saying is that I'm not a mouthpiece for the administration, they are right. I'm a Congressman first, as well as a spokesman for the administration," says Byrnes of the reports of the split.

He has told the White House that at least some of their requests for procedural moves on the floor and in committee were ill - advised from the standpoint of the party in Congress," Byrnes says.

One of the reports of the growing rift centers on a Byrnes' rejection of a procedural move on the recent trade bill during House action.

Byrnes told the White House that the move they had requested would jeopardize political futures of some GOP members of the committee and in the House caucus.

"I've got a responsibility as the ranking member on the committee to look after our members on that committee and to look after our members of the House — and that comes first," he says.

"As far as the White House goes — fine, if I can accommodate them," he says.

The House Republican leadership, when the White House pressed one recent point, "took my advice instead of the White House's," says Byrnes.

"The first job I have to is my conscience," says Byrnes.

"I can't just sit here as a member of Congress who has been on that committee for 24 years and just take anything that comes down from the White House, if I think that they are in error," he says.

Byrnes says it is because of that outlook on his role in Congress that he can be most useful to the White House.

His experience makes his judgments useful to the national administration in weighing alternative legislative courses, he suggests.

No Schism

"I have a responsibility to develop an accommodation between them (the White House and the Congress) so that there isn't a schism," he adds.

"But my responsibility as a Republican in Congress is a shade more than to the President as the titular head of my party," he says.

Republicans in the House look to him for leadership in financial matters in legislative action, Byrnes says.

"They look to me for that leadership and I should give it to them. If the White House calls and I just automatically went to bat for them, I would abandon that role. I would become a mouthpiece. And I'm no good to the White House that way, either," he says.

Byrnes stresses his past performance in winning House passage for Nixon Administration bills during the closing session when the subject of a possible schism is brought up. The Family Assistance plan proposed by the President and now stalled in the Senate won House passage because of the careful work Byrnes did on it among Democrats, in committee and in the floor fight, he stresses.

"I've done the same darn thing with other presidents," he says of both sides of the relationship.

Lucey Dodges Pay Increase Proposal

By ARTHUR L. SRB
Associated Press Writer

MADISON (AP) —Democratic Gov.-Elect Patrick J. Lucey, faced with a threatened fiscal crisis unprecedented in recent Wisconsin history, apparently wants no part of a move to boost the salary he will start drawing next month.

Such a stand would put him at odds with his running mate of the recent campaign, Lt. Gov.-Elect Martin Schreiber, and with Republican Atty. Gen. Robert Warren.

"I ran for the office knowing what the salary was," Lucey replied tersely when asked if he favored a boost.

4-Year Freeze

Pressure is building up in some quarters, however, because of a constitutional prohibition against salary hikes during an official's term of office.

In other words, if the salary hike isn't enacted before the 1971 legislature convenes Jan. 4, the salaries of Lucey and other officers will be "frozen" for the next four years.

GOP Gov. Warren P. Knowles receives $25,000 a year and ranks about 160th on the state payroll. He is 29th from the top among governors of the 50 states. Ten other state chief executives also draw $25,000 a year.

Warren receives $20,000 annually and is 24th nationally among attorney generals in salary.

Schreiber, who will move "up" from state senator to lieutenant governor Jan. 4, will take a salary cut—from $8,900 as a legislator to $7,500.

Warren and Schreiber were asked in an interview why they made no reference to what they considered low salaries when they were successfully campaigning for office this past fall.

Earn More

"You don't run for office for the money," Warren said. "But I think it's disgraceful that so many professors are earning more than our governor."

Schreiber said he voted for a Senate bill to boost the lieutenant governor's salary to $17,000 a year "before I got around to announcing my intentions to run for the office."

Under the bill, the governor's salary would be hiked to $30,000 and the attorney general's to $25,000. Salaries of the secretary of state and state treasurer each would climb from $13,500 to $15,000.

Schreiter and Warren said they hope the legislature will vote on the salary hike proposals if Knowles calls a special session to obtain Senate confirmation of his recent appointments.

A spokesman for Knowles indicated the governor would want the salary question to receive a thorough airing in the 1971 legislature. This would postpone salary hikes at least until January 1975.

As for the governor's $25,000 salary, Schreiber said, "it should certainly be increased."

"It seems to me that the people of Wisconsin would want to pay a salary to a governor which would be comparable to what a man would earn in private industry," Schreibe said, noting that Wisconsin's next budget will approach or surpass $2 billion.

Warren to Ignore Call For Austerity

MADISON (AP) — Gov.-elect Patrick J. Lucey's appeal for budgetary austerity on the state government payroll received a cold shoulder Monday from Atty. Gen. Robert W. Warren.

Warren the leading figure of Wisconsin's Republican party after surviving the Democratic victories in the Nov. 3 election, said he plans to proceed with hiring personnel for 19 staff vacancies.

"I'm going to go ahead and fill them," he said, referring to positions for which he said he received staff authorization from the Board on Government Operations a month ago.

Although he doesn't take office as governor until Jan. 4, Lucey appealed Monday to government agencies to suspend hiring for 30 days in hope of easing the impact of a $500 million gap between estimated revenue and budget requests.

"The State of Wisconsin cannot afford the luxury business as usual at this time," Lucey said.

Asks Freeze

He called the 30-day hiring freeze "absolutely essential" to help handle "an appalling fiscal emergency" that threatens to increase taxes.

The hiring freeze is similar to an appeal made early in 1969 by Gov. Warren P. Knowles when Knowles disclosed the budget contained a $25 million deficit. Knowles' austerity move helped trim the deficit.

Lucey has also requested agencies for a six-months moratorium on new consulting contracts, and an emergency restraint on travel expense accounts.

Exceptions would be allowed, Lucey said, after review by the Department of Administration. He acknowledged his request carries little official weight because he is not yet governor.

But "any citizen could make the same requests," the governor-elect said.

Warren said the 19 posts which he plans to fill despite Lucey's appeal involve consumer protection, crime and other categories.

Lucey Hints Support

Consumer Protection Agency Urged

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Governor-elect Patrick J. Lucey gave critical consideration to consumer protection measures and indicated he might support either a separate state department of consumer protection or a council to coordinate consumer complaints.

During a budget hearing called by Lucey on state and local government, more than one-third of the time was devoted to consumer problems and the state procedures for solving them.

Each person who testified in support of legislation to provide broader consumer protection was asked whether he favored a single consumer agency, or perhaps at least one consumer representative on every regulatory board and each department advisory committee.

Milwaukee attorney Thomas Jacobson who lost the November election as candidate for attorney general on the Democratic ticket set the pace for the discussion of consumer protection needs He cited a number of areas that were additions to those emphasized during his campaign.

He proposed a "people's mechanic" in the Department of Transportation to oversee mechanical repairs on automobiles. He also suggested the licensing of mechanics since their work has a direct relationship to highway safety proposals as well as to consumer protection complaints.

Control Credit Rate

Jacobson also proposed regulation of all credit charges, especially on car and furniture purchases that sometimes range as high as 26 to 38 per cent despite the state usury law prohibiting credit charges above 12 per cent.

To solve the high cost of legal fees that prevent many persons from seeking redress from wrongful sales practices, Jacobson proposed an administrative hearing procedure, similar to unemployment compensation hearings. Hearings would be available for claims under $500 and be held during evening hours so workers would not lose pay in attending.

State licensing of door-to-door and telephones sales and the provision of a seven-day cooling off period after the signing of contracts with door-to-door salesmen would prevent some abuses, Jacobson said

The requirement that merchants settle for either repossession or deficiency judgements, but not both, for unpaid accounts would protect consumers from double charges for merchandise they cannot afford. At present, he said, a merchant can repossess merchandise and charge the customer for repossession costs and the difference between the amount owed and the amount the merchant is able to resell the merchandise for.

The Milwaukee attorney also asked for legislation that would hold finance companies responsible for fraudulent charges against salesmen whose contracts they buy. Purchase contracts, he suggested, should only be sold to finance companies with the purchaser's knowledge and consent.

No Control

Representatives of three consumer leagues outlined scores of consumer problems in which the state now has no control. They called for speedier action on those complaints for which state agencies have jurisdiction, and a coordination of complaints in one state office.

State agencies receive possibly more than 10,000 consumer complaints annually, according to the estimates of agency representatives.

They range from about 3,000 consumer complaints processed through the Department of Justice's new computer system, administered by a consumer bureau of attorneys to as few as about 20 processed by the office of the Commissioner of Savings and Loan.

Wrong Name

The Justice Department and the Department of Agriculture are most involved in consumer protection. The agriculture department, it was suggested, is misnamed as about one-half its workload and budget involve consumer protection and regulation.

Secretary John Wilkenson of the Department of Agriculture cited his department's responsibilities that range from the regulation of antifreeze to the licensing of fur warehouses. Branch agencies, including one in Milwaukee with Spanish speaking employes serve four areas outside Madison.

Wilkenson said his department would recommend legislation to provide a consumer coordinating office under either the governor or legislature. It would be the one contact a consumer would have to make to have a complaint filed with the proper agency.

The regulatory boards, Lucey was told, are primarily concerned with regulating industries as a form of consumer protection against high charges for interest rates and utility rates, fraudulent or inadequate securities sales procedures and insurance company abuses, among other things

Savings, Loans Critized

Although few of the agency spokesmen recommended legislation covering the areas of the citizen complaints earlier in the hearing, the agency heads and commissioners said the boards and departments should propose such legislation when needed.

Lucey expresed considerable concern that the savings and loan institutions have avoided their social responsibility to lend money to low and middle income people for home purchases. He said that the associations in previous times were associations of blue collar workers who polled their savings to make money available for home purchases. The institutions, he charged, now are interested primarily in high cost homes and low risk borrowers among the upper class.

John Schlosser, deputy director of the savings and loan commission, agreed with the governor elect. He said the commission has been attempting to encourage associations to lend to higher risk customers and to consider participation in federal programs for low cost housing. But, he said the commissions statements are only recommendations as the law regulating the savings and loan companies is permissive and not mandatory.

Reading is still the fastest way to program the human brain.

Man's brain, the human computer, faces a problem. Like man-made computers, the brain can process data with such lightning speed that men are hard-pressed to devise ways of feeding it information fast enough.

In fact, the human brain has been called the world's finest, most expensive computer. By comparison, the largest electronic computer in use today looks like a child's plaything.

But in an era of "information explosion," how do you "program" information to the human brain? Spoken language is far too slow. The average person speaks about 150 words per minute. The mind can think far faster than that.

In fact, man has yet to devise a means of feeding information to his brain that is more efficient than the written word. Fast readers can read up to 1,500 words a minute—ten times the average rate for the spoken word. Scanning can accelerate this rate still more.

Perhaps some day men will devise some electronic system to program their own brains more rapidly. Until they do, no method is as efficient as the written word.

The alphabet, movable type and the printing press are among man's oldest inventions. But as tools for furthering human knowledge they are as modern as the most modern computer.

Perhaps this is the reason more people still get more information from daily newspapers than from any other source.

Young People Hit By Unemployment

WASHINGTON (AP) — When unemployment hits the work force, it hits young workers hardest, and some experts are saying the country may be in for a depression among the young unless the economy takes an upward turn.

"Not only could we have a young people's depression," said Ely E. Cohen, executive secretary of the National Committee on Employment of Youth in New York City, "in fact we do already have a depression among minority youth."

Cohen said unemployment among ghetto youths, blacks and Puerto Ricans, already is running 25 to 35 per cent.

"In the 1930s, when 25 per cent of the population was unemployed, we defined this as a depression." he said in an interview "At the rate which we're going, I fear we could very well have a 25 per cent unemployment rate for all teen-agers"

When the national unemployment rate rose to 5 8 per cent last month, the figure for teenagers hit 17.8 per cent, up 6 per cent over a year ago. November unemployment figures for white male and female teen-agers was 16 per cent. The figure for black male teen-agers was 25 per cent; for black females 40 per cent.

One of Six Out

One out of every six teen-agers seeking employment can't find a job, say officials.

"People who have never worked before or who are re-entering the labor force are having a tough time," said Harold Stambler, chief of Labor Department's Division of Employment and Unemployment Analysis "And there isn't much (hope) on the horizon for improvement."

Stambler said young people seeking full-time career jobs are having more trouble than for those looking for part-time positions. Part-time jobs have increased by 150,000 and full-time jobs have decreased by the same amount, he said.

Part of the difficulty, according to the Labor Department, is an unusual growth in the size of the work force at a time when the economy is in a slump The work force increased by 1.9 million, considerably more than usual, in 1970 The normal growth rate is 1.4 million. A major reason for the increase was the discharge of half a million men from the armed forces as the military cut back its manpower strength, a side effect of winding down the war in Vietnam.

"It's a problem which is growing substantially worse," said Stambler. "It's serious. They (teen-agers) may become more and more disillusioned. They'll have less choice of jobs. It may be longer before they set up housekeeping"

In the past few months, many teen-age job hunters have found that the position they hoped for has either disappeared or been filled by an older person forced by layoffs to take a lesser job.

In Los Angeles for example, severe cutbacks in the aerospace industry were felt first by people in the prime working age, and the state unemployment agency reports many of them are taking lower paying jobs that might otherwise have gone to young workers.

"Now it's much harder for young people to break into the labor force," said Gaylord Pitts, manpower analyst at the California Department of Human Resources Development. "They feel the impact of this, and in many cases, they don't even bother to seek work."

In Detroit, automotive strikes have closed doors to many high school graduates who had planned to work in auto plants

"I wanted to get a job as an electrician's apprentice, but now I'll take any type of work," said Charles Lewis, an 18-year-old high school graduate from Detroit. "When I was in school, I thought I could get a job with General Motors or one of the other car plants, but I've been looking since August."

William Trolley, manager of the Youth Opportunity Center, a branch of Michigan's State employment service, said the situation for people like Charles looks bleak. "We just don't have any place to refer them to."

College placement offices report that more and more students are hunting jobs to meet rising tuition costs and living expenses, and finding fewer jobs available.

"We see 2,000 students a year who need part-time jobs and now we can only fill about 1,500 of them," said Oliver Nichelson, a staff assistant in the Office of Vocation Counseling at the Unicersity of Massachusetts in Amherst. "The old stand-bys, hospitals and insurance companies, are very tight."

Sophomore Charles Edwards said he's footing his college bills himself and needs to earn between $55 and $80 a week for living and school expenses.

"I was a cab driver in Boston, but I lost the job when I was in an accident and I can't seem to find another one," he said

High school students, whose families are also feeling the financial pinch, find there's little part-time work in local businesses. Fewer babysitting jobs come up, too. People are going out-on-the-town less often than they did

"It's much harder for a student to get a part-time job than it was in September." said Ed Maclay, a high school vocational teacher in Rockville, Md "Our guidance counselors say about 20 seniors changed their selection of colleges for economic reasons and will attend community colleges when they originally planned to go to four year schools"

A coordinator for work experience programs in Maryland's Montgomery County feels some students use rising unemployment as an excuse not to look for work.

"If they're unemployed, it's often because they're too particular or they don't want to work," said Peter Gough.

Cut in Spending Assured by Family Council Director

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Virtually without funds because of free spending during recent months and pointedly told to apply normal financial controls applying within the state government, the executive director of the state Home and Family Council Monday assured state legislative leaders that he will cut his agency's costs drastically

Only his own salary check will be paid during the next six months, said Nester Kohut of the Council in a painful collision with legislative chieftains who will determine in the 1971 state budget whether his department will be allowed to continue functioning after July 1.

Kohut made his pledge after an hour of critical discussion inspired by a report of the state auditor that the family agency spent far in excess of its receipts during the last six months He said he would operate single-handedly, pending a legislative decision on a new funding program

"I will close the doors and make the kind of research study on problems of the family that this country has not yet seen," he volunteered.

The episode was probably the most difficult for the Council director since he came to his job in the troubled agency last year He has inherited a coalition of influential critics who have fired at the council during his tenure

The future of the agency and Kohut's career is in considerable doubt, according to the candid and critical comments of the legislative leaders. Several of them predicted that the appropriations for the family study group will be repealed by the new legislature, and Kohut was directed meanwhile to use the fiscal controls that were listed by Robert Ringwood, the state auditor, who said they are compulsory for all state funded services.

The troubles of the Council and Kohut started with the sponsorship of a statewide conference at Oshkosh in late summer that involved an expenditure of more than $30,000, a sum well beyond its prospective financing capacity.

The expenditure total was originally disclosed by the Madison bureau of the Appleton Post-Crescent and was promptly pounced upon by critical legislative politicians Under pressure, Kohut reduced his staff to head off a deficit. He told the legislators that he will dismiss his last secretarial assistant, which means that he will occupy his state capitol offices alone until July 1.

Legislators repeatedly demanded whether he intended to ask for emergency funds, and he and members of his policy board assured them that they have no such intention.

Robert Ringwood, the head of the state auditing service, said that he could not audit the records of the family agency adequately He said he could make no charge of defalcations, but criticized "poor controls" and recommended nonpayment of some of the remaining accounts payable for the controversial Oshkosh conference.

Rep. Willis Hutnik, Ladysmith Republican, called the Oshkosh conference a "big outing" and wondered how the public could be served by sponsoring the costly session at a "big night club", a reference to the sessions held at the Pioneer Inn.

Rep. George Molinaro of Kenosha, a powerful Democrat who will be co-chairman of the budget-writing joint finance committee of the legislature when it convenes in January, spoke sarcastically about a "dynasty of bureaucrats", and warned Kohut that he had better "have the answers" when he appears to talk about appropriations for the next biennium.

Rev. Frederic Gilbert of West Allis, a non-salaried member of the 17 member Council, told legislators that the state has one of the lowest divorce rates in the country and remarked that "there are people who don't want to help reduce the frequency of divorce"

He intimated that his agency's troubles have some relation to such hostile forces, but Rep. Harold Froehlich of Appleton, chairman of the legislative group, demanded to know more.

"Who are those people?" he asked

"Certain attorneys," replied Gilbert Later he added that some of the "permissive elements" in modern society scorn the efforts of all organizations that are trying to protect the integrity of family life in the state and the country, hinting that some of the criticism of his Council originated from such groups

'Separate' Action for SST Offered in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate critics of the supersonic transport revised their strategy today as the House prepared to vote on a scaled-down appropriation for the 1,800-mile-an-hour passenger plane.

House approval of a compromise $210 million for SST development was expected by about the same margin as the 213-174 vote last week for a full $290 million.

The Senate, which rejected any funds for the SST two weeks ago, is not expected to vote on the compromise before Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the two Wisconsin Democrats who led the 52-41 Senate defeat of the original measure offered a proposal to assure quick consideration of the $2.6-billion transportation bill, which includes the SST, by separating the proposal from the supersonic plane provision.

Sens. William Proxmire and Gaylord Nelson said they would be happy to let the main bill go through this month and vote on the SST money when the new Congress convenes in January.

Their move was believed prompted by the fear some anti-SST votes may be lost in the Senate as concern grows that time may run out on the major money package for highways, mass transit and other transportation programs.

Julie Secretly Joins in Friend's Wedding Party

GLEN ROCK, N J (AP) — Julie Nixon Eisenhower has honored a childhood pact by serving as an attendant at the wedding of a girlfriend here.

The appearance by the President's daughter was a well-kept secret.

Julie was an attendant at the wedding of Linda La Barre and Alan Detrick in St. Anthony's Church Sunday Linda and Julie have been close friends since they met in Key Biscayne, Fla., a dozen years ago.

They made a girlhood pact to take part in each other's weddings, and Linda was a bridesmaid for Julie and David Eisenhower two yers ago.

"I think one of the reasons for the secrecy." said a friend of the bride's, "is that Linda knew Julie would never want to overshadow the wedding."

Warts Attended Once a Month

CORVALLIS, Ore (AP) — Once a month it is Wart Day at Oregon State University.

The student health service removes, at no costs, warts from 30 to 40 university students who have had a previous examination.

Dr William Marriott, the physician in charge, says only one day is set aside per month because of the nature of warts and because the liquid nitrogen used to remove the growths lasts only four or five hours, prohibiting storage.

Parishioners Send Christmas Gifts to Niagara

KIMBERLY — Families in Niagara, the small northern Wisconsin community hard hit by the three-month strike at its Kimberly Clark plant will receive Christmas gifts from residents here.

Members of Holy Name of Jesus Catholic Church have added a program of sharing to their Sunday services. Parishioners bring wrapped Christmas gifts and place them at the altar before mass is celebrated.

The gifts, earmarked for more needy persons, will be sent to the Rev. Carl Steiner, pastor at St. Anthony Catholic Church in Niagara.

A similar sharing project prior to Thanksgiving resulted in many baskets of food collected for the Niagara area.

The plight of that community as the holiday season approaches was the subject of a recent article in The Post-Crescent.

Students Wary of Giveaway

STEVENS POINT (AP) — Not only are college students too old to believe in Santa Claus, they don't even seem to be convinced about the value of unearned money.

That's the opinion reported recently by a group of Stevens Point State University students who tested their campus companions by having a member of the group dress up as a bearded old man and give away $46

The 12-student group from a class in abnormal psychology put their disguised philanthropist in a booth. He is Mike Stark of Wisconsin Rapids, who clipped dollar bills to a clothes line and told passersby to help themselves.

Of 166 students confronted with the opportunity, only 46 accepted the bait Only two were willing to try to get more than $1 each.

Professor Dennis Tierney, who teaches the course, said the students decided that, "since our culture conveys a deeply inculcated disbelief against the promise of gaining something for nothing, we predicted that relatively few students would accept our offer"

"We were right," Tierney said "We expected mild mass paranoia toward the old man in the stand, and we got it"

Student participants watched the giveaway from a distance, and recorded passersby reactions with a camera They hope to interview the passersby later

Tierney said many of those offered the money "got very frustrated because the old man wouldn't tell why he was giving money away"

"Some thought it was counterfeit," he said, and others seemed to feel guilty about taking free cash

Erma Plans an Intimate Dinner

BY ERMA BOMBECK

All my life I've been trying to be "just another pretty face."

Heaven knows I've tried to follow the advice of ladies' magazines that tell me how to put excitement in my marriage, but the fact is, I'm too germ conscious to nibble on ears. (Besides, you never know where they've been.)

With some regularity, however, I go the intimate dinner route. I get the candles out of the attic (which have melted all over the Halloween masks), feed the kids early and slip into something that I wear under a coat until I hear my husband in the driveway.

It is my unworthy opinion that someone ought to tell men how to put excitement in their marriage. It's getting tougher and tougher.

The other night I met my husband at the door with his favorite drink. He set down his attache case and started to sip.

"What's that I smell?"

"It could be my new perfume, 'Intimidation.' The Avon lady said it brought a lot of her customers in off the ledge."

"It's not that," he said, sniffing.

"The incense then. I rubbed a little garlic on each light bulb. You know how the scent of garlic drives you crazy with desire."

"No," he hesitated, "It's the glass. I know what it is. This is the glass the kids use for the creme rinse. I saw it in the bathroom not two days ago. Where are the kids?"

"I fed them and sent them to a basketball game," I said softly.

"Hey, that's the game I wanted to see," he said. "What time does it begin?"

"Forget the basketball game," I shouted, "We are having an intimate dinner together."

"What are we having?" he asked.

"Beef a la ground," I said.

"That's as intimate to hamburger as I want to get tonight," he said.

"Have you no imagination?" I stormed.

"Look," he said, "I come home and you're wandering around in your pajamas with garlic all over the light bulbs, giving me a drink in a bathroom glass and doing everything to hamburger but dressing it in a tutu, and you say I have no imagination. Let's go up to the high school and catch the last half."

I have the feeling Joey Heatherton would have cried.

'Four Marias' Wait for Santa

By JOHN PLATERO ....

— Mexico's "four Marias' are anxiously waiting for Christmas, but their parents see little chance that the day will be noted for its gifts.

The girls are the survivors of quintuplets born Feb. 2, 1967 to Mr. and Mrs. Pablo Ortiz.

"I want a new doll," said Maria Elena. "I'd like a pedal car," Maria Candelaria chimed in with a big smile. Maria de Jesus and Maria de la Luz said they would like the same things.

The children sat around a wicker basket rubbing kernels from corn cobs to feed turkeys and chickens roaming outside their home.

Friendly Children

Each girl has bright, sparkling brown eyes. Although somber at times, they are friendly to visitors and offer tiny hands for help to hop down steps or to walk about in the yard. Their hair is cut short because, as Mrs. Ortiz put it, "there isn't enough time to comb them all."

"Each of the Marias is different from the other with her own personality," said their mother, who is about 30. "But, usually, when one gets sick, the others are ill soon after," To combat this, Mrs. Ortiz takes most of her children to her nearest neighbor—about a half mile away—as soon as one of the girls doesn't feel well.

There are four other children, the eldest 8. "I don't have much time to myself," said Mrs. Ortiz, "and because the children haven't much to do all day, they fight a lot."

Their playthings consist of worn-out flashlight batteries or odds and ends they have found.

In a way, the multiple births have brought a degree of success to the children's father. He now earns $65.44 per month as a janitor in a government building in Cuernavaca. He was getting 50 cents a day as a communal farmer when the girls were born.

Three-Room House

They live in a small three-room cement block home given by the Morelos state government. It lacks electricity and a refrigerator. Most of the windows are broken and the area swarms with flies, mosquitoes, wasps and numerous iguanas.

Water must be carried from a stream about a quarter-mile away. Mrs. Ortiz cooks most meals in a black metal pan over a wood fire in a sort of lean-to separated from the house. A four-burner gas stove is seldom used because they can't afford fuel.

Chavarria, a small peasant village, is a mile away. Ortiz takes a bus there six days a week for his two-hour journey to work. Transportation costs $32 a month, which leaves a dollar a day for his family. Mrs. Ortiz has a borrowed sewing machine. When money allows, she purchases material and makes her children's clothing.

The federal government provides free medical care for the children from a hospital located in Zacatepec, about an hour away. Weekly, the hospital sends some food to the family. This includes pasta, rice, fruit juice, two chickens and 30 eggs.

"The children need milk," the mother said "and they need blankets and beds." The four young girls sleep in tiny bassinets which were gifts when they were born.

Mrs. Ortiz outwardly is a happy mother although she has been disillusioned somewhat. The parents don't look for charity but say many promises made to them were never kept.

The quintuplets were born on the dirt floor of a relative's shack where the Ortizes lived at the time. They were delivered by a circuit-riding doctor and a midwife who worked by candlelight The fifth child, also a girl, was stillborn.

Michigan's Unique Antipollution Law Producing Suits

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A small but wide-ranging array of lawsuits has been filed under a unique antipollution act which took effect in Michigan Oct. 1.

More suits are in the offing as conservation groups carefully choose their targets.

But one fear of the bill's opponents—that courts would be swamped by an immediate flood of frivolous filings—has not materialized.

Meanwhile, no decisions have been rendered under the new act and at least one challenge has been made to its constitutionality.

Basically, the law permits any person or group to sue any other person or group to protect natural resources of the state from pollution. The filer does not have to show personal loss. And not even the state is immune from prosecution. It is believed to be a first of its kind in the nation.

No suits are pending in court against state agencies yet, but officials with responsibility for resources are expecting challenges from conservation groups who consider regulations too lenient.

A statewide check turned up a relatively few suits filed under the act, including these —On the day the new law became effective, the Wayne County Department of Health's air pollution control division charged Chrysler Corp., McLouth Steel Corp. and Edward C. Levy Co with permitting pollution of the air. Morton Sterling, director of the division, said the cases were filed as a test to see what action the courts would take.

In its reply, Chrysler challenged the constitutionality of the law. The auto firm said the law violates both the U.S. and Michigan constitutions because the acts prohibited are phrased so vaguely that they violate due process of law. No date has been set for court arguments.

—Another first-day suit was filed by state Rep. Robert Davis to stop the State Department of Natural Resources from issuing any oil and gas drilling permits in the Pigeon River Forest area. Davis withdrew after the department decided to hold off on further permits.

Gets Injunction

—An association of property owners and the board of Hamburg Township won a temporary injunction in Livingston County Oct. 7, preventing Northfield Township from expanding a sewer system around Whitmore Lake. This was despite approval of the expansion plan by engineers in the state Public Health Department. The same groups also are seeking removal of the sewer discharge pipe from nearby Strawberry Lake, contending the lake is becoming intolerably polluted. The matter is expected to go to trial early next year.

—A suit filed in Branch County Circuit Court in Coldwater, Mich., Monday, alleges the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and Michigan Water Resources Commission are using lakes for waste disposal.

10 Feared Dead in Crash Of Plane Off Navy Carrier

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. Navy courier plane crashed today shortly after it was launched from the carrier Ranger in the Tonkin gulf, and the six Americans and four Filipinos aboard were feared killed.

A spokesman said two bodies had been recovered, and there were no signs of survivors.

First reports said all aboard were Americans, but later the Navy announced that four of the passengers were Filipino repairmen employed by the Navy in the Philippines.

The plane, a twin-engine, prop-driven C2A Greyhound, was on its way back to its base at the Cubi Point Naval Air Station in the Philippines with six passengers and four crewmen. It was delivering mail and personnel from ship to shore and "went down shortly after normal catapult launch," the Navy said.

Ships and helicopters of the carrier task force in the Tonkin gulf were making an extensive search.

Identification of the Americans was withheld until their next of kin were notified.

Temple Blasted

Meanwhile, South Vietnamese headquarters reported two grenades ripped through a crowd praying in a Buddhist temple in the Mekong Delta Monday night, killing 17 Vietnamese and wounding 87.

It was the second successive night grenades had taken a high toll in the Delta. On Sunday night a grenade killed 13 Vietnamese and wounded 50 in a crowd of villagers watching the community television set.

The government said Viet Cong terrorists hurled two grenades into the temple at Long Trung, 44 miles southwest of Saigon. But officers in the field said they were still investigating.

The government also blamed the Viet Cong for the grenade explosion Sunday night 65 miles southwest of Saigon. But officers in the field said that grenade apparently slipped off the belt of a South Vietnamese soldier who was drunk. The soldier was killed.

7 GIs Killed

The U.S. Command belatedly disclosed two incidents last Saturday in which seven Americans were killed and two wounded.

In one, an eight-man infantry patrol got into an old American mine field just south of the demilitarized zone in the dark Saturday night, and six of the men were killed and the other two wounded.

The Command said six of the eight Americans were killed and the other two were wounded. The patrol was from the 1st Brigade, 5th Mechanized Infantry Division.

One of the men had been wounded by a booby trap or an antipersonnel mine, the U.S. Command said.

"The patrol, while evacuating the wounded man in the dark inadvertently entered an old U.S. mine field and detonated an undetermined number of antipersonnel mines," a spokesman said.

On Saturday morning, an Air Force F4 Phantom fighter-bomber was hit by ground fire over the Plain of Jars in Laos.

Crewmen Killed

Informed sources told AP Correspondent Michael Putzel that the canopy of the plane flew off, one of the two crewmen parachuted into the jungle, and enemy troops killed him. They said the other flier flew the plane back to a base in Thailand and landed unhurt.

Salvatorians Told to Plan Pay-off

MILWAUKEE (AP)— The Society of the Divine Savior, a 19-state Roman Catholic order which operates a number of schools and seminaries, was directed Monday to draw up a program for settling debts with an estimated 2,400 creditors.

The directive from Dale E. Ihlenfeldt, bankruptcy referee, is a culmination of half a decade of financial woes which the Salvatorians say began with investments in Parkwood Inc. of Washington, D.C., whose former controller was sent to prison last month for misusing funds.

Ihlenfeldt ordered a debt-settling plan be submitted to U.S. District Court by April 15. He named a five-member creditors panel to help work out the plan.

The Milwaukee archdiocese, one of the creditors, has called the Salvatorians' financial problem the first of its magnitude for a major U.S. Catholic order.

In a petition filed Nov. 3 with the court, the order cited $8.6 million in debts and less than $17 million in assets.

The Milwaukee - based order represents about 150 Salvatorian priests and 100 brothers. Its efforts to recoup financial losses began in February, 1967 when it announced plans to sell seminaries in Sioux City, Iowa, Blackwood, N.J., and Lanham, Md.

It operates Mount St. Paul College, whose campus in nearby Waukesha is now for sale; a camp in Hancock, Wis., and a seminary and prep school in St. Nazianz, Wis.

Debts Listed

It has listed debts payable to archdioceses of Boston, Newark, New York and St. Paul, the Catholic bishop of Chicago, the Trenton diocese, 93 Catholic religious orders, and other creditors.

Parkwood's former controller, Victor J. Orsinger, began serving a term last month in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., two years after being convicted of misusing funds entrusted to him by another religious order.

The Securities and Exchange Commission had filed suit against Orsinger in February, 1966. His conviction was upheld by a federal appeals court June 3, 1970.

The Rev. Edward DeBruin, 43, the order's American provincial director, told a hearing Monday that the Salvatorians "are prepared to do whatever is necessary to settle with our creditors."

Could Save Order

Ihlenfeldt said the debt settlement plan could save the order, a nonprofit corporation, from being dissolved by bankruptcy.

Should the group be dissolved through such proceedings, he said, the Salvatorians would have to decide themselves how to continue their church functions.

Calley Witnesses Say Village Death Ordered

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — One after another, witnesses called by Lt. William Calley Jr. say they thought his company commander, Capt. Ernest Medina, had pronounced death on My Lai village.

Five witnesses at the lieutenant's court-martial on murder charges testified Monday the captain set the scenario for the March 16, 1968 assault when he gathered Charlie Company around him the day before.

"We were told that we were going to the My Lai, Pinkville, area—going out on a search-and-destroy mission, that we could expect one or more enemy battalions," said S.Sgt. Martin Fagan of Ft. Hood, Tex., who was still on the stand when the Monday session ended.

"My impression was that anyone remaining in the village, regardless whether they were men, women and children, were to be killed," Fagan said.

"He said we were going to Pinkville," said S.Sgt. L. G. Bacon, one of Calley's former squad leaders, an Army veteran now stationed at Ft. Campbell, Ky. "He said we were going to where the 48th Viet Cong battalion was and we were to kill all Viet Cong, all Viet Cong suspects, all NVA (North Vietnamese army) and all NVA suspects, destroy all food sources, kill all animals and burn the village."

From Maps

Pinkville, a name born from its shade on military maps, was the My Lai area.

"To me that meant women and children and everything else," said Elmer Haywood of Baytown, Tex. "Viet Cong sympathizers can be any of these ... my impression was they were all to be killed."

And said Gene R. Oliver Jr. of Cincinnati, Ohio: "Destroy—that was the word. We were suppose to level that place."

The defense hopes to show that Calley, who is charged with the murder of 102 civilians, was obeying orders from a superior.

Medina has been charged with over-all responsibility for civilian deaths at My Lai and is undergoing Army investigation to determine if he should be tried. Last December he told a news conference at the Pentagon:

"I did not order any massacre at My Lai 4. I had initially given a briefing .. and the briefing was such that we were going to do battle with the 48th VC Battalion."

He was asked whether he ordered the shooting stopped.

Received Order

"I received an order from the Task Force S-3 (operations) telling me that to make sure there weren't any innocent civilians, any women and children being killed there. I put this information out over the company command net and it was given to the platoon leaders over the company command net."

Calley was the leader of Medina's first platoon, which charged through the center of My Lai. A member of the third platoon, which entered the village later, said Medina's cease-fire order was given about noon. Prosecution witnesses indicated all the killing had been carried out before then.

"When Capt. Medina gave the order to cease-fire I never heard another shot," said Stephen Glimpse, a blond, talkative 22-year-old from Portland, Ore.

Fagan, computer fire director of Medina's mortar squad, said he saw about 100 bodies and recalled that "later in the day Capt. Medina called higher headquarters and asked permission to change the mission from search and destroy to search and clear. Later permission was granted and he called platoon leaders and told them to cease-fire."

Freighter Hijacker Wants to Return

PHNOM PENH (AP) — "I only regret I didn't sink the ship," one of the hijackers of a U.S. ammunition freighter said today as he walked into the American Embassy in Phnom Penh to surrender.

"I still believe in the revolution in America and in the revolution in Cambodia," Alvin L. Glatowski, 20, of Long Beach, Calif., told newsmen. But he said he felt he would get a fairer deal in the United States than in Cambodia.

Glatowski and Clyde W. McKay, 25, of Escondido, Calif., took over the 10,000-ton Columbia Eagle in the Gulf of Thailand last March and forced the crew into the Cambodian port of Kompong Som. They have been indicted by a federal grand jury in Los Angeles on charges of mutiny on the high seas, assault, transporting kidnaped persons in foreign commerce, and neglect of duty. They could get the death penalty on the mutiny charge.

The ship and the rest of its crew were released and completed the voyage to Thailand.

Join Enemy

McKay got away from a Cambodian guard in a Phnom Penh restaurant in October and disappeared with an American deserter from Thailand. Glatowski said then he believed they were headed for the town of Siem Reap to join Communist forces fighting in Cambodia.

Glatowski said two days ago that he was thinking of doing the same thing himself because "it's either that or stay here and rot."

Glatowski and McKay were kept on a prison boat on the Mekong River for a few weeks after the hijacking. They complained about the conditions there and were put in the servants' quarters of a government guest house in Phnom Penh and then in a hotel.

Paid Bills

The Cambodian government paid their hotel bills, and they technically had political asylum. But they were actually under a form of arrest, free to move about in the city but always escorted by Cambodian guards.

Glatowski told newsmen today he had received good treatment at first but that it had recently deteriorated. He said his guards had pulled guns on him and had tried to force him to escape so they could kill him.

"But I don't have any desire to run," he said.

Glatowski walked into the Embassy and told Robert Blackburn, a political officer, that he wanted to give himself up.

"Fine, Come In"

"Fine. Come in," Blackburn said.

Blackburn said the youth would be flown to Saigon and then to the United States as soon as the Cambodian government canceled his asylum. This formality should be completed some time today, Blackburn said.

Splashes of Color Pervade Bergstrom

NEENAH — The Christmas season opened with a splash of color and design at the Bergstrom Art Center and Museum Sunday as patrons crowded in to see the gala opening of "Christmas 70."

Unique hand-wrought designs in antique leaded glass fashioned by Eve Roeck hung from branches and caught the eyes of on-lookers. Tapestries in antique and modern themes by area artists enhanced the museum walls. Mrs. E. K. Nielsen added her private collection of icons to the showing.

The exhibit opening concluded with a choral presentation by the Shattuck High School Madrigal Singers.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Shields, Oshkosh, above, ponder the design of one of the many wall hangings currently on exhibit at the Bergstrom Art Center. Sunday's opening was geared toward the Christmas season. Below, Mrs. Ernst Mahler and Stanley Severson, both of Neenah, examine the decorative multicolored modern and antique leaded glass tree trimmings.

Your Problems

No Possession Is Worth Bullet in Head

BY ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: What kind of world are we living in anyway? Almost everybody I know has been mugged, slugged, burglarized, had a purse snatched or a wallet lifted. Twenty years ago we never even locked our doors at night. Today I wouldn't dare walk after dark from the bus stop to my apartment, even though its less than two blocks.

I am a widow who lives alone. In the last three months four tenants in this building have had their apartments broken into. Please tell me (and millions of others) what a woman should do if she suddenly finds herself face to face with an intruder. (My next door neighbor opened the door at noon for a man who said he was a building inspector. She was bound, gagged and robbed. Another woman's apartment was entered at 4 a.m. by a man who had a passkey. She was robbed and raped. What is the answer? Should I buy a gun? — Just in Case.

Dear Just: Don't buy a gun. Too many people have guns already — this is part of the problem. Furthermore, if the intruder sees you have a gun he might use his gun, even though he didn't plan to. A woman alone, if she is in bed, should stay there and feign sleep until the intruder leaves. Then she should call the police. If she is up and around she should hand over the money and jewelry without a word. It is impossible to know if the intruder is on drugs, a fugitive from a mental hospital, or an inexperienced kid pulling his first job. No possession is worth a bullet in the head or a knife in the heart.

Here are some preventive measures: Have double locks and chain-slotted protection on front and back doors. If you live on the ground floor, iron window bars will serve to discourage prowlers. Never open the door for an unexpected caller. Do not, repeat do not leave money or jewelry lying around. It can tempt a person to return later and make a killing — both literally and figuratively.

Make sure your valuables are insured. You will then not feel inclined to risk your life to save them. And don't forget one of the best deterrents of all — the watchdog.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please give me a professional answer. Sometimes old-fashioned horse sense is not enough. Here's the problem: When my husband and I visit the homes of friends, the hostess usually says (after about half an hour) "Do you want a cup of coffee or a soft drink?" We invariably reply, "No thank you. Don't bother." Most hostesses then say, "O.K." and they never mention it again. They feel as if they've performed their duty.

When my husband and I have guests I always ask, "What would you prefer coffee, tea, or a soft drink?" Usually the guests specify a preference.

I have always felt it is rude not to encourage a guest to have refreshment. My husband says I am wrong and that I shouldn't push it. Do you agree with him or with me?—Fence-Sitter

Dear F.S.: I'm with you. Most visitors enjoy refreshments. The gracious hostess makes the suggestion in a way that encourages an affirmative answer. Stay with your old-fashioned horse sense, honey. It's better than any professional opinion.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

by IRA G. CORN JR. TEAM CAPTAIN

The successful declarer must base his plan on all the evidence that can be collected.

On some hands, discovery of a defender's high-card strength will suffice On others, to learn a defender's distribution will do. And on still others, discovery of both high-card strength and distribution is required.

Observe the play of today's game hand by Billy Seamon of Miami Beach, Fla., in a recent team contest.

The bidding was identical in both rooms, North selecting a temporizing two-over-one response with his in-between hand of 11 points.

East's preempt of four hearts created a problem for North. Perhaps North should have doubled to collect a sure profit. However, the vulnerability conditions persuaded him to try for the spade game.

When played the first time, South won the opening lead with his king of clubs and cashed dummy's two high spades, East discarding a low heart on the spade jack. South then finessed the diamond jack, which held the trick.

West's remaining trumps were then drawn and the ace of diamonds played in hopes of dropping a doubleton king. When this failed, South lost his contract, losing one diamond and three heart tricks.

When Seamon was declarer, play to the first four tricks were identical. After winning the diamond finesse, Seamon assumed, as did the first declarer, that East had all seven hearts and the diamond king. However, Seamon was not satisfied with discovery of the high cards; he also wanted to know something about the distribution.

Seamon drew West's remaining trumps, played a low club to dummy's ace and ruffed dummy's last club. When East discarded, Seamon knew East's distribution. East's preempt and West's failure to lead hearts strongly suggested all seven hearts with East.

East's holding of only three black cards made his possession of three diamonds a certainty. Seamon knew that a play for the doubleton diamond king must fail.

Since East's hand was reduced to red cards, two of which must be diamonds, Seamon relinquished a heart to East. East could cash his three high hearts but then was forced to lead from his king of diamonds to provide Seamon with his 9th and 10th trick. Note that if East had followed to the third club, Seamon would have confidently played the ace of diamonds to capture the doubleton king.

Billy Seamon's play of this hand was directed at collecting all possible evidence. His extra care was rewarded by a substantial gain.

Sleep Less, Work Harder

The less you sleep at night, the more efficient and hard working you're apt to be. Sounds strange, but that's what psychiatrists at Boston State Hospital found out in a study of 400 men aged 20 to 40 years.

As reported by the Spring Air Mattress Company, men who habitually sleep more than nine hours a night tend to be introverted, passive and mildly depressed. Men who get along with six hours sleep or less were efficient, hard-working and achievement oriented.

The Ailing House

Book Will Give Date Of Chest

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

Q: We have a steamer trunk with brass around the main section, an arched top and wood strips around the bottom edge and rollers. How old do you think this might be? — Marion, O.

A: No knowledgeable antique dealers in your community? If not, your library must have some books on antiques and identifying them. (All of which is by way of saying "I don't know"; no odes have ever been written in praise of my knowledge of antiques.)

Q: What caused a white mold to appear on the fireplace bricks in our den? This is the first year for the building. — Bayside, Wis.

A: Not mold. A lime deposit called efflorescence, caused by free lime in water which is working its way out of the brick. When it gets to the surface, the water evaporates, leaving the deposit. Given a few years, it will disappear. You can greatly speed it up by washing with a solution of one part muriatic acid in 10 parts of water. Leave it on five minutes or so, then rinse off thoroughly. Difficult part is not letting this corrosive stuff get anywhere else. Wear old clothes, goggles, heavy gloves, mix in a non-metal container.

Q: I plan to repaint the furniture to be used in my children's room. Also the woodwork. Which paints are safe to use, from the standpoint of possible lead content? Or are all paints safe? — Boston.

A: Even though all paints and enamels for indoor use to the best of my knowledge are now made lead-free, it will never hurt to examine the label to make sure on this point. If any doubt remains, ask the paint dealer too.

Q: My new wall cabinet has vinyl synthetic finish. Some candle wax spilled on it, and I was told to use only window glass cleaner; no petroleum product. But the cleaner didn't clean off the wax. What can I try? — Milwaukee.

A: Hold a piece of clean white blotting paper over the wax (I assume you have scraped up all you could). Set your iron at low-to-moderate heat and run it back and forth over the blotting paper. Heat is to melt the wax, and the paper to blot it out.

Fabric Richness

In late day and evening clothes, there is a richness: Duvetyn makes a surprise reentrance; panne or cut velvet are used imaginatively. Obviously crepes and matte jerseys fall into the new soft mood, along with chiffons, satins, sheer lames.

The Responsibility of helpng Santa by trimming their very own tree makes children feel important and special and serves as a reminder to be very, very good. Supplies needed for such a project are a dime store tree and ornaments you make yourself ahead of time from play clay which is cooked up out of baking soda, cornstarch and water.

Homemade Ornaments For Children's Own Tree

What could make children feel more important and special than to decorate their very own mini-tree. Such a tree shouldn't shake your budget, for it can be of the dime store variety, the ornaments made of play clay ... a cooked up mixture of baking soda, cornstarch and water.

Time for the ornament-making is while the youngsters are off at school or taking their afternoon nap. The place ... the kitchen where you whip up the clay as follows:

Combine thoroughly in a saucepan 2 cups baking soda (one 1-pound package) and 1 cup cornstarch. Mix in 1¼ cups cold water. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Cook a minute longer or until mixture resembles moist mashed potatoes. Remove from heat immediately (over-cooking makes clay crumbly). Transfer to a plate and cover with a damp towel. When clay is cool enough to handle, knead a little and store all but what you're about to use in a closed plastic bag.

For your first session ... it will take two ... you'll need in addition to the clay, a rolling pin, wax paper and the snipped off ends of paper clips which serve as tree-hanging attachments. You'll also need cookie cutters and aspic cutters to stamp out the shapes. If you decide to come up with your own designs, partridges, angels, drums and the like, you'll need white paper on which to draw the designs and scissors with which to cut them out for patterns.

When all is assembled, roll out the clay on wax paper to ¼-inch thickness and cut out shapes. While clay is still soft, press in the snipped off paper clips and any other embellishments you wish to add. Now slide all your finished pieces onto a cookie sheet and hide for a day or until ornaments are bond dry.

For your second session, paint your pieces using water colors or tempera; and to give them a ceramic-like finish and help preserve them for Christmases to come, dip each in a panful of clear shellac.

If you're foresighted you'll make some extras for the family tree, which always seems in need of a few more ornaments. Custom-making them saves money. Set the extras aside.

Save the rest for one of those days when you wish Christmas were long past and the children back at school. The responsibility and fun of trimming their own tree for Santa is guaranteed to turn even the most unruly into Santa's good little helper.

Gloves Make Fit-ting Gift For Christmas

What is the most fit-ting Christmas gift to give? Sleek fashion-fresh leather gloves is the merry answer, says Leather Industries of American.

Leather gloves add an impeccable touch to any costume, while offering protection and, when needed, warmth. Glove trim this season offers great variety, and the American leathers used are lush yet durable: kid, cape, suede, pigskin, deerskin and others.

Chic leather shorties are a part of today's fashion story, and new style notes keep them fun to wear. Give dashing shorties finished at the wrist with fringe, stitching, a touch of brass or buttons, frogs in a contrast color or braid. In other types of trim, there are tassels on fingers and backs as well as cuffs; knuckle-holes; embroidery; stitching around fingers.

If a less casual glove is desired, hand in the height or the length of fashion: new longuette leather gloves. These four to six-button gloves may be unadorned, or feature buttons, tassels or fringe. Perhaps smartest of all on these longuettes is cuff treatment, where the glove's edging or cuff may be scalloped, detailed wiht cutouts or flared for a gauntlet feeling.

If after-five attire is the call give gloves with glamorous supple leather up to above-elbow and shoulder length. Trim — aside from pearl buttons as closing — might be fur, jeweling, embroidery, appliques or bows.

Especially for cold weather donning, a pair of leather gloves snugly lined in wool, fur or shearling will be appreciated.

Levies Lower

Hortonville School Costs Stay Below State Average

HORTONVILLE — School costs were reviewed by the board of education during its meeting last week. The cost of operation per student, in dollars spent and operating levy rate in mills, was below the average in the state in all of the past six years.

The net operating cost per pupil for the state is estimated at $764 during the 1970-71 school year. Hortonville figures its cost is $640, or $124 less. In all of the last six years the differences range from $32 to the present $124.

In operating levy rate required, the Hortonville district is below state averages within a range of one mill in 1965-66 to 2.92 mills below the state average in the past six years. Net operating costs are used by the state in determining state aids to school districts. Capital outlay debt retirement expenditures are not included in net operating costs. Some receipts are also deducted.

Total levy rates for all school purposes in Hortonville was 1.2 mills higher than state averages during 1965-66 and 1966-67, but 1.2 mills to 3.0 mills lower during the years 1967-68, 1968-69, and 1969-70.

A proposal for a newsletter, prepared by a professional publishing company and distributed throughout the district was discussed, and rejected by the board. The costs of the service would have been between $325 and $425 per newsletter.

The board decided that the school officials could use school reproduction equipment for the purpose when feasible. It also was noted that the newspapers serving Hortonville accepted nearly all news items the school has available for printing.

Huebner Named

Luther Huebner was appointed as the official voting delegate from the Hortonville School District to the Wisconsin Association for School Boards convention in Milwaukee in January. Floyd Meyer was appointed as the alternate delegate.

The board learned that the district received a 30 per cent reimbursement from the state, totaling $2,300 for capstone courses in business education and agriculture.

The money is used for the salary of the teachers and for equipment. The equipment includes are a large mimeograph machine, steam cleaner for cleaning engines, a metal band saw, and wrenches.

At an earlier meeting the board approved the taking of an option on 13 acres of land owned by Lother Lenzner, just east of Warner Street, and north of a tract of seven acres already owned by the school district.

Holiday Concert Set at Roosevelt Junior High

The Roosevelt Junior High School cadet and concert orchestras and the eighth and ninth grade choirs will have their Christmas concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The orchestra will be conducted by Mrs. Derald De Young, and Mrs. F.H. Orbison, a student teacher. Mrs. James VanDenElsen and Gerald Solberg will supervise the chorus.

KIMBERLY — A total of 14 high school students, the majority of them sophomores, maintained A averages for the first quarter of the school year.

On the honor list are Debra Demerath and Patricia Hoppe, seniors; Steven Ruys, the lone junior, and 11 sophomores: Peter Biersteker, Anne Brouwers, Kathleen Dietus, Pamela Hartwig, Debra Kane, Candee Koehn, Debra Van Geffen, Mary Weiland, Ann Weyenberg, Diane Wolter and Kathleen Wood.

In order to raise money for special school projects an all-school dance from 7 to 9:45 p.m. Dec. 22 has been planned by the Madison Junior High School student council.

The council donated the money raised from the Halloween dance to UNICEF. Another $600, raised from special events, went toward the purchase of a new scoreboard. It was dedicated in November, during the first basketball game of the season.

A dozen pieces of furniture, made by Robert Schultz, industrial arts instructor at Appleton High School-East, are being shown at Alverno College, Milwaukee, through Jan. 22.

The display includes cabinets, chairs, chests and lamps.

Both Schultz and Joe Perez, also an instructor at East, have works on display at the Art Independent Gallery in Lake Geneva. Schultz is slowing and lamp and Perez, silver jewelry.

Washington and Lincoln Schools and the guidance department of Wilson Junior High School are joining forces in a new program called "Help a Child."

Currently, 25 students from Wilson are spending their free school hours with primary students in the elementary schools, befriending and working with the youngsters who need a little guidance and help.

Through such a one-to-one relationship, it is hoped that the younger child will develop a better self-concept.

The same type of program, in turn, is coming to Wilson from interested AHS-West and Lawrence University students, who spend an hour per week with the junior high school people, who need the help.

Spanish Club Plans Faculty Christmas Tea

KAUKAUNA — The High School Spanish Club will hold its annual "Christmas Tea" for faculty members and invited guests at 3:30 p.m. Thursday in the school cafeteria.

Assisting in the plans are members of the Home Economics Club and Orchesis. The latter group will present its version of the Mexican Hat-dance. Spanish songs will be offered as part of the program, which will include the traditional breaking of the pinata.

UW Medical Center Issue At Crisis Stage

MADISON (AP) — A University of Wisconsin official said Monday that the school's medical center outlook is bleak and near the crisis stage.

"It's a question of whether we can make a second rate center into a first rate medical center," Madison vice chancellor Irving Shain said.

Shain, who headed a special task force set up last June to look into the center's operation, cited these major weak points:

Crowded and obsolete facilities, a lack of mission and a lack of money.

Shain made his observations in an interview and noted that a full report of the study group may be given the UW regent board at its Friday meeting.

Madison chancellor Edwin Young created the task force when Dr. Peter J. Eichman resigned as medical school dean and director of the center. He agreed to stay on for the duration of the task force study.

Eichman said he resigned to focus attention on the medical school crisis, particularly its administration difficulties.

"Thir typersonsr perd-tol "Thirty persons report directly to me," he said. "As a method of management, that is impossible."

Shain praised Eichman for holding the center together with its limited financial support. He cited Eichman's resignation for jogging the university into action.

"He forced the issue," Shain added.

The task force head also cited a cutback in federal funds as one of the problems.

Misconduct Charges Brought Against Three At Kimberly Night Club

Two entertainers and a patron of a Kimberly night club have been charged with disorderly conduct in connection with an allegedly indecent performance there Friday night.

The three pleaded innocent Monday and will stand trial Dec. 22. Outagamie County Judge Gustave J. Keller will preside. Kimberly police said the incident occurred at the Firelite Lounge, 210 N. Main St.

The entertainers have been identified as Michael Cintron, 24, Milwaukee, and Helen McKellip, 30, 1651 Eugene St., Menasha. Also charged was Roger Van Roy, 24, 115½ W. Ninth St., Kaukauna.

County Judge Nick F. Schaefer set bonds for them at $100.

Retired Persons' Group Elects New Officers

Officers have been elected for the east-central Wisconsin chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons.

They are Clarence O. Baetz, president; Joseph F. Kraus, first vice president; John S. Oliver, second vice president; Geraldine Sarrasin, recording secretary; Marie Ginnow, corresponding secretary; Madeline Walsh, treasurer, and, Lottie Johnson, assistant treasurer.

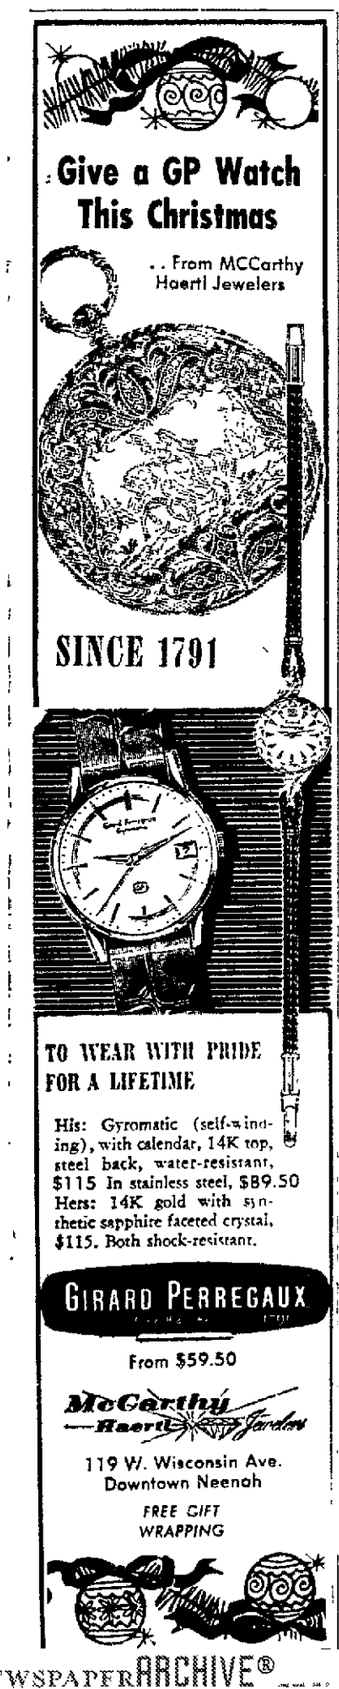

Library Club At Little Chute Remembers GIs

LITTLE CHUTE — For the fifth straight year the Library Club of Little Chute High School sponsored a Christmas drive to help servicemen. Focusing on men unable to arrive home for the Holiday, the club's 60 members conducted a door-to-door campaign throughout the village to get funds to buy Christmas presents.

With the $284.84 that was collected Dec. 8, the students set out for Fox Cities stores to purchase wallets, cards, games, cigars, cameras, and shaving kits. All joined last Friday at the high school library for a wrapping party.

Then on the Saturday that followed, a group of ten under the direction of Mrs. Carolyn Servais, took a brief trip to the USO Center in Milwaukee. There they presented the gifts to the army for distribution on Christmas Day.

Most of the gifts will be sent to soldiers now overseas.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Name Tag May Guard Against Loss of Change

BY CAPPY DICK

A name tag attached to a small change purse may prove to be important if the purse ever is lost. If it is found by an honest person the purse will be returned.

The method of affixing the owner's name is so novel the idea could become a fad. Figure 2 shows how the name and address will appear on the outside of the purse. The information can't be rubbed off.

Here's how to work the stunt:

First, use a ball point pen to print your name and address on the sticky side of a two-inch length of transparent tape.

Next, cover the printing with another two-inch strip of transparent tape, applying it sticky-side-down.

Have Mother stitch this strip to the side of the purse as shown in figure 2. The color of the purse will show through the double thickness of tape, yet your name and address will be clearly in view.

SEND FOR THIS BOOKLET OF PARTY STUNTS!

Mothers! If you need new ideas to entertain your children's scout meetings and birthday parties, you'll find 45 of them in Cappy Dick's "Birthday Party Stunts" booklet. To get a copy, send 50 cents in coin, plus a self-addressed, stamped envelope to CAPPY DICK BOOKLETS, P.O. Box 42877, Evergreen Park, Illinois 60642.

Gift of Song Doubles Its Meaning for YMCA

'Christmas Time is Love' Kip Vincent's 1970 Melody for Annual Concert Sunday

BY JINGO

"Christmas brings us
Christmas love
Peace and Hope from up above:
Christmas Time is meant to be
A Christmas Time of Love."

This is the chorus of the holiday song Mrs. Clifford (Kip) Vincent has written for the 1970

Jingo

Christmas concert at the Appleton YMCA at 2 p.m. Sunday.

The song is her gift to the Red Beret Girls Chorus she's been directing ever since it was organized about six years ago. This year her gift also includes her brand new Boys' Choir, which will perform Sunday afternoon both alone and in harmony with the girls' group.

"Christmas Time is Love" is the name of the 1970 song. There have been many others she has written, mostly on the Christmas theme, starting with the 1948 "Merrie Christmas to You" and going through the songs for the Catholic Daughters, "Christmas Walk" and "Christmas Roses."

Others are "The Brotherhood Hymn" and "A Salute to St Elizabeth", the latter written for the dedication of the new St. Elizabeth Hospital.

Chorus in 6th Year

Now in its sixth year, the Red Beret Girls' Chorus was organized by Mrs. Vincent under the name of Appleton Y Girls' Chorus. This soon changed, however, when Kip Vincent wrote the group's theme song, "Walking in My Little Red Beret."

She wrote the lilting, marching rhythm song first, then she perched red berets on her girls' heads. As she says, they have been walking on and off stages ever since to the brisk, catchy melody. The 1970 Chorus now dresses in an ensemble of white slipover tops, navy blue skirts, white knee socks with the addition of short white gloves and the red beret, which gave the group its name.

Today there are 64 girls in the Y chorus. The girls will present their own portion of the program in their own inimitable way, then they will join the new Boys' Choir for a grand finale. The program this year is called Christmas Fantasy — A Family Affair.

This will be the boys' first public concert Mrs Vincent took over the job of training the 25 boys in her choir only this year. Dressed in a uniform that features red vest, scarlet bow ties setting off their white shirts and darker trousers, the boys will present their own portion of the program before joining the girls in the new song "Christmas Time is Love."

Many Songs

Mrs. Vincent has kept busy all these years, coming up with a new song every yuletide season. Her works include "Christmas Tambourine," "Christmas Lullabye" (1965); "Merry Jingle Bell (1966), Christmas Carrousel (1967); "Shining Christmas Star" (1968); and last year's "Christmas Times A-Coming."

Sunday's program will include favorite carols, some not so familiar, and the new song. There'll be "Drummer Boy," "Christmas Alphabet," "The Twelve Days of Christmas" and several others.

It will be a treat just to hear the new song gift to the chorus and choir, which in turn will sing the song together for the first time.

Mrs. Clifford (Kip) Vincent sings her 1970 holiday gift to the Appleton Y Boys Choir and Red Beret Girls Chorus while a member of each of the musical groups chimes in. "Christmas Time is Love" will be the featured number when the youngsters present their combined Christmas Concert at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Appleton YMCA. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Board Adopts First of Cuts

Capital Outlay Halved, Programs Cut Deeply for $480,000 Total

The Appleton Board of Education approved $480,000 in 1971 budget cuts Monday night but failed to decide how it will find the additional $170,000 that it must cut to meet the Fiscal Control Board's mandate.

The additional cuts probably will eliminate programs, and therefore existing teaching staff, but the only indication the board gave, was that it probably will make the other cuts soon.

The cuts Monday night didn't eliminate programs but cut deeply into capital outlay for instructional equipment and supplies and programs. Teachers and administrators and at least two board of education members said that it damaged the district's quality of education.

Following a Dec. 1 board of education directive, Acting Supt. of Schools Orlyn Zieman came up with the list of cuts which he said would avoid the most serious effects on educational quality. But, he noted, they're "not quite near the $600,000-plus figure." The cuts approved were almost identical to his recommendations.

Loss in State Aids

The fiscal board ordered a $600,000 cut in the board of education's $10.7 million budget recently, and the cut means an additional state aid loss, thus bringing the required reduction to probably $650,000.

The cuts Monday apparently didn't eliminate existing teachers but it undoubtedly would increase their load for next September because the 16 new teachers to be hired then to meet anticipated enrollment increases were eliminated. Teachers probably will fight this possibility in upcoming bargaining sessions.

The board probed Monday for more ways to make cuts, wondering about staff reductions. Zieman noted, for example, that to come up with a savings of $100,000, some 30 to 35 teachers would have to be refused new contracts in September of 1971, assuming that each would be making about $3,000 during the September through December period of the 1971 budget year.

Further Cuts Deferred

Zieman and administrators were given no mandate to begin seeking further cuts. The board only voted to defer further cuts until future meetings, the next being Dec. 28.

It also didn't act on a conclusion by Zieman that the board authorize the administration to make a study "with an eye to eliminating those programs which are not essential or are too expensive to operate." His thought was to find a long range solution to the school fiscal situation, not a short range one.

The administration went through the budget item by item, chipping here and chipping there. It cut capital outlay by 50 per cent and eliminated the $24,000 for a summer curriculum upgrading study. A motion to keep $15,000 for the study lost on a 3-3 tie vote.

What Direction?

The board wrestled with what general direction to take — make all cuts soon or hold off hoping for some efficiencies during the year which might take the pressure off the budget.

Mrs. Mabel McClanahan, a board member, reminded: "We've been given a mandate by the Fiscal Control Board." She urged that cuts be finalized "very soon after the first of the year."

However, she questioned whether the fiscal board order for a $600,000 cut meant that much in the tax rate or that much from the 1971 school budget. The board of education has assumed over the years that fiscal board cut figures were from the tax rate and the schools have always suffered losses over and above the cut as a result of state aid reductions. State aid is based partly on local contribution.

An attorney general's opinion will be sought.

High School Boundary Changes OK'd

Shift to Send All Einstein Students To West in 1971

The board of education approved boundary line changes for the two public high schools Monday night, basically shifting the Einstein Junior High area in northeastern Appleton from East High's district to West High's.

The change was made to maintain enrollment balance between the two schools over the next several years. Seniors, graduating in the class of 1972, won't be affected by the shift, and juniors next September also will have the option of staying at East or transferring to West.

However, all new sophomores (present ninth graders at Einstein) will move in September of 1971 to West.

There are no changes in the line from Marquette and Drew streets south to the river and along the Fox to southwestern Appleton.

Therefore, Roosevelt Junior High School will continue to send its students to both high schools, the only school remaining divided between the districts.

The change comes in the area north and east of Marquette and Drew. Originally, the line ran north on Drew then east on Northland Avenue and then north again on Lawe Street to Florida Avenue and continuing due north dividing the block with Lawe and Rankin as its east and west boundaries.

In the September of 1971 line, the boundary will run due east on Marquette from Drew to the eastern edge of the district, thus shifting the students living north of Marquette and east of Drew to West's district.

The addition to West and the growing enrollment of East precipitated the boundary change, administrators said.

Jerome Boettcher, West principal, and Stanley Ore, East principal, said that they "sought a dividing line that would cause West to grow approximately 250 to 300 students due to the boundary change in the first year and continue to increase toward its capacity in the next three years."

It also would allow East to grow back to its optimum in the same period, they said. Optimum enrollments are 1,900 for East and 2,000 for West.

The principals also noted the transportation routes and reduced the division of a junior high district. Einstein students will only attend West.

They said that students who will be juniors at East next September should have their parents notify by letter the East High administration indicating which school their child will attend. "The letter must be received by Feb. 15, 1971," the principals said. "The choice is final."

Students Urge 'Careful Cuts'

In personal pleas and petitions, Appleton high school students have urged officials to not forget their educational needs in the budget-cutting process.

West students came up with three separate resolutions. They urged the school board to adopt a policy of maintaining the district's educational level, to consider deficit spending, and to avoid cutting extra-curricular activities funds.

"The future of Appleton's youth is in the hands of the Appleton Board of Education," one resolution said.

An Appleton East petition protested the budget cuts and reminded that kids would be back on the streets if they weren't provided with activities, such as swimming and gymnastics.

The East Girls Athletic Association urged that GAA not be eliminated, as was effected by the East High administration.

Shooting Death Ruled Justifiable

BY PETER BACH
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The killing of a burglary suspect by an Appleton policeman during a stakeout of Xavier High School late Saturday night has been ruled justifiable homicide.

Outagamie County Coroner Bernard H. Kemps, investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of Richard Martin Eickhoff, 42, Madison, made the decision after an investigation with the district attorney's office.

The ruling is contained in a three-page statement. Kemps said that the statement was prepared after he and Dist. Atty. James Long questioned participating police officials Monday nght.

Eickhoff was fatally wounded about 11:40 p.m. Saturday when pellets from a shotgun blast from a veteran Appleton police officer struck him in the chest. Another suspect, Harry Mueller, 28, Madison, was also hit by gunfire, but he lived.

Authorities, acting on a tip supplied by an informer, staked out Xavier, 1600 W. Prospect Ave., about 9 p.m. The informer furnished them with facts detailing burglaries at the high school, and another which was supposed to take place the same night at nearby St. Bernard Catholic Church. Eickhoff and Mueller did, police said, strike at the church, but they left. From there, police said, the pair went to Xavier with the intention of burglary.

Shortly after 11:30 p.m., one of four police officers hiding in the office area of the school where the vault is kept ordered the pair to halt.

The informer had warned that the men might be armed, but they weren't that night. On orders to halt, the two men crouched, as though to go for concealed weapons. At least two shots were fired, one wounding Eickhoff and pellets from either that shot or another hitting Mueller, causing a chest wound which hospitalized him.

In the statement prepared Monday night by Kemps and Long, it was revealed that the police department had been told that the two men were armed and had bragged about killing two policemen. Police were informed that if the men were caught, they would not hesitate to shoot it out with authorities. One of the individuals, in fact, had been involved in a shootout with police in southern Wisconsin, where two were wounded and hospitalized.

At 11:28 p.m. Saturday, the report says, police inside the school heard one of the doors being pried open. Minutes later, the officers observed two men crawling along the floor toward the safe.

As the pair crawled, according to the statement, they were overheard discussing the location of the safe. One of them directed the other to check for an alarm. More talk centered around finding a possible point of escape from the building.

The two men were seen wearing stocking caps dark clothing and gloves.

Extreme Caution

Additionally, the statement said, one other individual entered the building shortly before the alleged burglars. Police officers identified the person as no burglar, indicating they exercised extreme caution that no innocent persons would become involved. Long earlier said that a teacher had entered the

Bubolz Proposes Council

Pollution Warning System Urged

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — Establishment of a state environmental quality monitoring system was advocated at Gov. Elect Patrick J. Lucey's budget hearing here this morning.

The suggestion was made by Sol Burstein, Milwaukee, senior vice president of the Wisconsin Power & Light Co. He stressed that it is essential to develop personnel and instrumentations to provide for standards and enforcement in the growing area of environmental protection.

"My own company has spent $20 million on environmental protection, and we really don't know what actually has been accomplished in terms of what the problems really are," Burstein said.

Scheduled through Wednesday afternoon, the hearing at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay Shorewood campus is concerned entirely with environmental problems, particularly those that the state will face in the next four years that Lucey is governor.

Lucey opened the hearing by reviewing general environmental concerns.

Problems Complex

"As we discuss these vital concerns, let us remember that the problems of pollution are very complex. There is no single problem cause and no single problem solution. Pollution is a result of a system of independent, yet inter-related variables," the governor-elect declared.

He emphasized that population distribution is an important factor in environmental protection.

"The environment is capable of absorbing and assimilating certain amounts of wastes. Problems occur when the capacity of the environment for waste assimilation is exceeded," Lucey added.

Lucey continued that technology also affects pollution levels.

"In the past," he said, "we have been too eager to accept the gift of technicological advances without asking what we will have to take on to the product cost in the way of environmental tax. We are now questioning whether that tax might be accepted.

Have Tools

"We already have many of the necessary technological tools to reduce the damage being done. We must see that those tools are used to the greatest extent possible."

The governor-elect seemingly left the door opening for additional much needed spending on environmental protection.

"Where technological tools for pollution control are inadequate," he said, "increased emphasis must be given to the development of those tools."

Gordon A. Bubolz, Appleton, chairman of the Northeastern Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, (NWRPC), urged "needed correctional measures" in his presentation at the hearing.

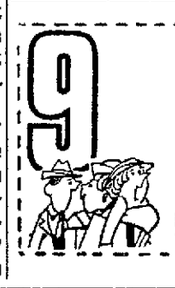

The problem of pollution has been identified, he declared, and what must be done to clean up and maintain the waterways is known. "What we need now is enforcement action against polluters and money to be expended on cleanup technology."

Proposes Council

The governor should create a state planning council to advise him on managing the state's natural resources, said Bubolz.

Comprised of regional planning commission chairmen, University of Wisconsin scientists and state legislators, such a state council would, by feeding information to the governor from local areas, help unify planning at the highest level.

Bubolz noted that federal grants for specific antipollution projects are not available unless the projects are included in an effective regional or metropolitan plan for pollution abatement. A state council could help insure getting federal money for the projects, he said.

Couple Arraigned On 2 Burglaries

A Combined Locks couple requested a Dec. 23 preliminary examination this morning on charges stemming from an incident Saturday night in which a burglary suspect was shot and killed by police.

Irvin Zehren, 40, and his wife, Florence, 39, made the request before Outagamie County Judge Gustave J. Keller. Arraignment proceedings were initiated before County Judge Nick F. Schaefer today, but he disqualified himself, noting that the Zehrens are being represented by an attorney who has a civil suit pending against him.

The Zehrens are charged with the burglaries of St. Bernard Church and Xavier High School on Dec. 12. The criminal complaint naming the couple and Harry Mueller, 28, Madison, alleged that those three and Richard Eickhoff, who was slain, discussed breaking into the places before the burglaries.

Keller, after reviewing a bond study, reduced Mrs. Zehren's bail to $1,500 and allowed her to sign for the balance after producing $150 in cash.

Zehren was returned to the county jail, after Keller noted that he was not ellgible for bail. Keller made the judgment after consulting a bond study.

The defense attorney asked the court "to enjoin anyone from further comments on the guilt or innocence of these parties."

He cited a comment made by Dist. Atty. James Long that the Zehrens were "principals in the crime". He termed this "a direct comment on the guilt or innocence of the parties concerned."

Keller replied, nodding in the direction of two news reporters seated in the courtroom, "They heard your statements and they can be guided accordingly."

Eickhoff was killed Saturday night after police, who had staked out Xavier High School on information supplied by an informer, fired a shotgun blast which struck him in the chest. Mueller, who also was hit by gunfire, has been transferred out of intensive care at St. Elizabeth Hospital.

He awaits a court appearance on the same two burglary charges when he is released.

Thomas Fox Named Clerk Of Assembly

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Thomas P. Fox, youthful third-generation member of a family of Chilton Democratic party activists, will be responsible for the housekeeping of the 1971 Wisconsin State Assembly when it convenes under Democratic party control on Jan. 18.

The 24-year-old University of Wisconsin law student Monday was chosen chief clerk of the lower house of the legislature to replace Wilmer Struebing, of Brillion, who was head of the records department there during the last two legislative sessions.

Fox won support of a majority of the Democratic state representatives at a closed caucus that also chose William Quick, a 61-year-old Milwaukee political figure, as sergeant-at-arms to relace Louis Romell of Adams, who served in that office under the Republican Assembly majority in the last two legislatures.

Continue Studies

Fox said that he hopes to be able to continue law school studies this winter and during the spring semester, if he can adjust his class schedule to his state capitol work requirements.

The two hired officers of the Assembly are paid about $10,000 a year, plus perquisites that follow the general pattern of allowances authorized for elected members of the legislature.

Both had several rivals in their bids for election, but the names of the other contenders and the precise results of the balloting were not made public.

The new assembly clerk is a son of the late Jerome P. Fox, who served in the Assembly nearly 40 years ago and was floor leader there for the Democrats who won a majority of the seats in the Democratic landslide of 1932. Later he was an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for governor and served as chairman of the state party committee. He also was a lawyer. Leo P. Fox, grandfather of the new Assembly clerk, was the Democratic party nominee for lieutenant governor in 1928.

Fox was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for secretary of state in last fall's primary election.

Bids Opened for Stretch of U.S. 10

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Bids for construction of 1.3 miles of U.S. 10 between the U.S. 41 interchange and the Soo Line Railroad tracks were opened today by the State Division of Highways.

The apparent low bidder for the project that includes grading, base and surfacing was R. E. Beaudoin and Son, Menomonee Falls. The company's bid was $885,552.

Bids also were received for improvement of 1.2 miles of Winnebago County Trunk E in Oshkosh between U.S. 41 and North Campbell Road. Streu Construction Co., Two Rivers, submitted the apparent low bid of $278,530.

April Referendum

Binding Vote Asked on Bus Subsidy

If a referendum is held next spring asking Appleton residents whether they favor subsidizing Fox River Bus Lines, some city officials feel the voters' decision should be binding on the City Council.

Ald. Glenn R. Thompson (13th), who proposed the referendum, told the Council's Finance Committee Monday that he prefers a mandatory referendum, rather than an advisory one that the council could either follow or ignore.

Personnel Matters

The committee instructed Finance Director David Champion to ask City Atty. David Geenen how the referendum question should be written to make the outcome binding, and to report the attorney's advice to the committee's next meeting in January. The referendum would be conducted with the April elections.

Geenen said this morning that a referendum on such a question, if placed on the ballot by council initiative, would be merely advisory. For the outcome to be binding, he said, the question must be placed on the ballot upon petition of the electorate, and if the vote orders a subsidy the council must adopt it.

The committee also dealt with personnel matters and agreed to schedule a special City Council meeting to go over the city's 1969 city audit with the auditors.

The audit was distributed during a City Council budget meeting earlier this month and several aldermen raised questions that were put off with a promise that the auditor would be brought in later. The local firm of Pusch, Larson & Seifert audits city finances.

Committeemen also signed resolutions to be presented to the council Wednesday night boosting from 50 per cent to 100 per cent the portion of retirement fund payments made by the city for certain employes.

Firemen and salaried, nonunion employes would receive the new benefits, which must be approved before the end of the year for the Wisconsin Public Employe Retirement Fund, administered statewide in Madison, to make the changes for 1971.

Under Negotiation

Other benefit changes and pay increases for the firemen and other organized employe groups are still under negotiation, and pay hikes for the nonunion group also are under study, with council action to be taken later.

The committee also approved employing the city attorney's secretary to handle personnel department secretarial chores as well, at an increased rate of pay. The attorney and personnel director at present each have their own secretaries.

The committee also recommended authorizing the mayor, clerk and treasurer to sign checks paying for a variety of contractual agreements on the 1st of each month, rather than at scattered times.

The payments range from union dues withheld from firemen's pay and turned over to the Fire Fighters Association to rental fees on office machinery, as well as insurance and retirement fund payments.

Champion said the city's negotiating team is attempting to have payment dates removed from union contracts by making the date uniform for all such payments. Operations in his office also will be simplified, he said.

Yost Lost U.N. Job Because of Middle East

Never Said So Publicly but Was Concerned Over Administration's Pro-Israel Policies

BY ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Behind the decision to replace the United Nations Ambassador Charles W. Yost with Rep. George Bush of Texas lies a subtle, undercover anti-Yost intrigue that tarred him, in the words of one top U.S. diplomat, as "insufficiently pro-Israel" in backstage UN maneuverings.

If President Nixon's earlier, aborted plan to replace Yost with retiring White House aide Daniel Patrick Moynihan had not inadvertently leaked before Yost himself was informed by President Nixon, these maneuvers by critics of the ambassador might never have come to light. Yost and Mr. Nixon would have arranged a quiet, harmonious separation.

But as it happened, the leak made it crystal clear that Yost was being fired. That stimulated a search for the reason why, both at the United Nations and by politicians here.

The undercurrent suspicion of Yost by his zealous pro-Israeli critics was originally based on his experience as a U.S. diplomat assigned to the Arab world. He served as ambassador to both Syria and Morocco.

Concerned Over Hostility

But beyond that Yost — while never once departing from Nixon administration policies on the Middle East — made no secret of his growing concern over Arab world hostility aimed at the U.S. because of the increasingly intimate relations between the U.S. and Israel. He spoke forcefully and frequently within the U.S. government of his conviction that President Nixon must keep the heat on Israel to withdraw from Arab lands captured in the 1967 war (an Arab demand that President Nixon ducked on Thursday night).

Moreover, when Henry Kissinger, Mr Nixon's top foreign policy adviser, called last summer for expelling the Russians from the Middle East, Yost cabled the state department pointedly that there was only one realistic way to accomplish that — settlement of the dispute. Then the Arabs themselves would get rid of the soviets. That did not endear him to Mr. Nixon, Kissinger, or top state department Middle East operative, Assistant Secretary Joseph Sisco.

Then, when Yost was trying to manipulate an escape for the U.S. from the pitfall of a pro-Arab resolution in the UN General Assembly six weeks ago, he fought against offering a competing U.S. resolution because it would only dramatize the U.S. - Israeli alliance. He was overruled in Washington.

These independent (but unpublic) positions of Yost resulted in a stream of back-stabbing (but unpublic) criticism funneled in to top figures in the Nixon administration.

No Public Criticism

Yet despite the high volume of this criticism, described to us by a highly qualified political source as "brutal," no public attack on Yost of any real substance can be found in the printed record.

The explanation of the furtiveness of this attack on Yost is obvious. To have surfaced it could have tied Mr. Nixon's hands and threatened a pro-Yost backfire.

Further adding to Yost's poor relations with the Nixon administration is the fact that he rarely made an appearance on a public platform. In dramatic contrast to his predecessors, Yost has kept discreetly in the background. But that was precisely the way Mr. Nixon described what he wanted his first UN ambassador to do when he hired Yost two years ago.

The President had originally offered the job to Sargent Shriver, cut from the glamour cloth of many previous UN ambassadors. But when he and Shriver failed to agree on guidelines, he swung a full circle to quiet, unglamourous Yost.

Thus, unlike predecessors Arthur Goldberg, Adlai Stevenson, and Henry Cabot Lodge, Yost was relegated to the back rooms of policy, a vulnerable target for attack by the potent pro-Israeli lobby.

Now Mr. Nixon returns full circle to his original concept of what kind of ambassador should represent the United States at the UN In forceful, charismatic George Bush, a politician with a constituency of his own and no prior Middle East involvement, the skillful, pro-Israeli lobby will not find an easy target.

Menasha Authority Seeks Council Nod For Housing Plan

MENASHA — The chairman of the Menasha Housing Authority (MRA) asked aldermen Monday for quick action on an agreement that would lay the groundwork for a $2.5 million elderly housing project in Menasha.

Gerald Wagner said quick approval of a cooperation agreement could open the way for the authority to apply for federal funding of a project by February or March.

The cooperation agreement, which was discussed briefly at the committee of the whole meeting last night, is required before the authority can apply to the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for funding of a project for 150 elderly and 20 low-income family housing units.

4-Page Agreement

City Atty. Richard Steffens did question a section of the four-page agreement that required the city to eliminate or repair "unsafe and unsanitary" dwelling units in the community equal to the number of new units built in the two projects (170).

"Do they really mean this?" he asked, implying it would be hard to find that many dwellings in that category in Menasha.

"It must be for some place like Chicago," Mayor James Adams interjected.

Third Ward Ald. Sumner Parker said the section didn't create any problem for Menasha, because if "there are none ("unsafe and unsanitary" dwellings), then we would not be obligated to eliminate or improve them."

'Water It Down'

Steffens said he'd "like to see it spelled out" by HUD. Wagner then recommended that the council "water it (agreement) down as far as we can before first sending it to HUD, because HUD can send it back for revision if it doesn't like the way it's written.

Once the agreement is approved by aldermen (there's a chance it will get approval tonight), the MHA will hire the Nika Corporation, Madison, to act as consultants for the authority in preparing a funding application for the two projects, Wagner said.

He said they could probably get an application in by February or March. Six months later, HUD will give them a reservation number, Wagner said, which will tell them when they can expect funding and construction of the projects.

Sewer-User Levy May Pay Cost of Twin City Plant

MENASHA — A proposal for a sewage treatment user fee, based on water flows from Neenah and Menasha water plants, was thrown at Menasha aldermen Monday night.

They were told by Mayor James Adams that an ordinance could be written up in time for the Jan. 4 committee-of-the-whole meeting. The mayor hopes an ordinance can be adopted in both Neenah and Menasha by mid-January.

It would go into effect July 1, 1971. It would be used for the remainder of 1971 to finance extra work done to bring the plant in line with state pollution abatement orders. The rest of the normal plant operation would be financed out of city tax monies that have already been committed in 1971 budgets.

Adams said that, with the experiences gained in the second half of 1971, the plants can be converted to a revenue-producing operation by January 1972, with no support through local tax monies.

The proposal, which grew out of meetings between Neenah and Menasha government leaders last week, would:

—Set up a fee scheduled for homeowners and industry based on their water bills from the Neenah and Menasha water plants.

Adams said this would mean about 73.7 per cent of the cost of sewerage plant operation would be furnished by local industry, because industries, during the first nine months of 1970, used about 73.7 per cent of the water coming from the two water plants.

Adams admits this would be giving industry a bit of a break, because most estimates place total industrial flows to the sewage treatment plant between 80 and 85 per cent of the total.

Many industries take water from private wells or the Fox River, but send their effluent to the treatment plant for treatment. They would not, under the present fee schedule, pay for that.

But Adams said he was "content to start at about 75 per cent" and take additional steps later on (after experience gained in the second half of 1971) to figure in additional industrial flows from lake and well sources.

NM City Hall Offers Saving Of $1 Million

NEENAH - MENASHA — A joint city hall for the Twin Cities could save more than $1 million according to a Neenah alderman who served on a committee to study the feasibility of a single administrative complex to serve Neenah and Menasha.

Ald. Michael Ellis reporting that it would cost about $340 to have the 123-page study put into printed form, suggested, "I think you're going to be surprised at the dollar and cent savings with a joint city hall."

He told the Neenah finance committee that although the report goes into depth on the cost and space savings which could be accomplished through a joint complex, a basic recommendation is suggesting "further investigation."

"A joint complex will provide a noticeable savings and greater efficiency without diluting the automony of either city," Ellis told the Neenah committee.

"The report has the full backing of the (joint study) committee, but this is only a preliminary report," Ellis said, hinting that if the two cities were serious about combining resources in a joint administrative center, that it would require more investigation.

He said several alternate sites were suggested as to where the complex could be located as well as ways of financing it.

"The figures in the report are as accurate as they can be at this time," Ellis said.

About a month ago, Ellis told the city council that the reports would be submitted to Mayors Roman Hauser, Neenah, and James Adams, Menasha, and it "would be up to the mayors to decide if the report should be made public."

Baby Sitters Available For Christmas Shoppers

The service will be held between 6:30 and 9 p.m. at St. Joseph's old school building. The charge will be 50 cents a child per night.

Parking Meters Get Backing in Menasha

MENASHA — An ordinance that would repeal all parking meter regulations in Menasha prompted unexpected opposition Monday night.

It also led to a claim by one alderman that "some (parking) tickets are fixed," and an admission from Police Chief Lester Clark that he was right.

The proposed ordinance surfaced during budget sessions this year. It was intended to cut police department expenditures for parking stall patrol and the processing of parking tickets.

Ald. Felix Ropella, Jr., however, asked Monday why the city wanted to eliminate parking meters. He, along with some other aldermen, wondered if parking ticket fines could be increased to pay for the expenses of maintaining the system.

"We're going to have a man patroling off-street parking," Ropella said. "Why can't he do this?"

He agreed that the system was a money-losing operation now. But he suggested raising the fine. Ald. Robert Winarski agreed that "maybe we ought to start jacking up the fines."

Winarski backed following some suggestions made after a management audit by Donald Hassler, to improve the ticket processing procedure.

Clark said he couldn't afford to take those steps unless he made more than the current 50 cents on each ticket. He's suggested a fine increase in the past.

Winarski then charged that some tickets were reportedly being "fixed" at the department.

Clark said he was right. He gave an example of a man who went into a local dentist, endured some painful bridgework and came out to find he had received a ticket.

Clark said the man came to the department, explained his situation, and Clark canceled the fine.

"I'm human," he said. "I've done it a lot, and I'm going to continue to do it." City Atty. Richard Steffens said he'd done it, too.

He also noted that he "fixed some 15 tickets for this very organization about two weeks ago." Aldermen blushed.

The elimination of parking meters will be on the agenda for tonight's meeting.

Board Adopts First Of School Cuts

dent, said the board had held off in past years on making all cuts immediately but had always managed to balance the budget by the year's end.

Received Pleas

The board received pleas from parents groups and students with resolutions, all seeking to preserve certain programs in the system. The Appleton Education Association (AEA) also urged that quality education be maintained even if schools have to be closed late in the year.

The board didn't act on the AEA request but Charles Buchanan, board vice president, finally noted that it would be irresponsible and a "terrible gamble" by the board to assume that lost school days could be made up in the following June out of the 1972 budget. He said seniors would be in danger of not getting enough credits to graduate.

The $480,000 cut was opposed by Sager and Mrs. Harold Danford. Sager noted that it was pulling the system down below the educational quality level it should be at.

Mrs. McClanahan, John McKenzie, Buchanan and Karl Becker voted for it. John Schneider was absent.

The board then voted to defer further action on cuts. The motion came after McKenzie suggested that administrators, teachers and board of education members informally give "serious thought" to the direction that the school district take in curriculum, the backbone of any school system.

Other board members have commented in the past that a whole new look is needed at the ways things are being handled and the programs offered. The curriculum study, which was killed in the budget cut, was partially aimed at "changing the way of doing things," Jerome Boettcher, West High principal, said Monday to a board question.

In other business, the board:

— Tabled a proposed pupil grievance policy after Robert Buesing, Appleton East student council president, said it contained "ambiguities, including a process requiring several weeks to finality.

— Accepted two resignations and one leave of absence for three teachers. The administration was authorized to hire a replacement for the West High French teacher in January.

Girl Struck by Auto Will See Physician

A young Appleton pedestrian, who was struck by an automobile on W. Winnebago Street Monday afternoon, will consult a physician for back pain, and facial bruises.

Appleton police said that Bonnie M. Uhlenbrauch, 15, 819 W. Taylor St., sustained the injuries when she was struck in the 1500 block of W. Winnebago by a car driven by Barbara L. Kramer, 17, 913 N. Harriman St.

Miss Kramer told authorities she was westbound when she approached a group of pedestrians. She sounded her horn, and braked, but slid on icy pavement into the Uhlenbrauch girl.

A Good, Old-Fashioned Christmas play, "A Partridge in a Pear Tree," has been revived by the Fox Valley Lutheran High School Drama Club. The one-act comedy, concerning a marriage ritual, is being presented to many organizations during the month for some holiday fun. Jean Huebner and Bob Mackinen go through a courting scene to fulfull the unwritten law that on each of the 12 days of Christmas the girl is to receive a gift if the marriage is to take place.

Streets Committee Denies Entry To City of Factory-Built Home

On the basis of an opinion by City Atty. David Geenen, the Streets and Sanitation Committee of the Appleton City Council has denied a permit to move a two-section, factory-built home onto a site in the city.

E&R Construction Co. of Neenah requested the permit and the Board of Building Inspection recently recommended granting it. Geenen ruled that the board overstepped its authority to grant variances from ordinance restrictions.

Rather than being a variance, permission to move a home into the city would directly contradict an ordinance prohibiting moving dwellings into the city from other communities, according to the city attorney.

Members of the committee Monday at first questioned Geenen's ruling that the modular home, built and transported from the factory in two pieces, is a home until it is assembled on the site.

The committee tacitly accepted Geenen's ruling after Public Works Director Robert Miller pointed out that an amendment to the ordinance to permit moving factory-built houses into the city also has been proposed for adoption. The proposal will provide an opportunity to debate the issues as well as giving a second chance for issuing the permit if the ordinance is amended.

The ordinance change is expected to encounter opposition. Ald. Richard Schouten (19th) remarked, "The home builders have been fighting this, and they're going to continue fighting it." Construction tradesmen are viewed as likely opponents of factory-built housing.

In a letter requesting the moving permit, Raymond A. Gensler, secretary of the Neenah firm, said E&R has placed the first of four of the modular homes built by Mill-Craft Housing Corp., Waupaca, on a site in Neenah and intends to accelerate construction of the type in this area.

Gensler explained the effort as a response to "the constant increase of the cost of housing, and in an attempt to stabilize cost but conserve quality."

Coroner Rules Shooting Death As Justifiable

building as police awaited the burglars.

The statement revealed that when the pair went into a crouching position, an officer other than the one who did the shooting also observed them go into the same position. Then, the closest officer fired in their direction. Two other officers hidden about 100 feet away also heard the halt order given three times, then heard a pause between the orders and the shooting.

Kemps and Long said in the report that "based on extensive interviews of all the parties involved in the shooting,...the police officers exercised extreme caution and took all reasonable steps necessary to apprehend the burglars without a shooting."

"Exercise of Duty"

"The shooting was in the proper exercise of their duties," Long and Kemps concluded.

"From all the circumstances surrounding the shooting, there is no reason to believe that the death of Richard Eickhoff was the result of homicide in any degree, or the result of suspicious circumstances, or of any criminal conduct, whatsoever."

The ruling precludes a coroner's inquest.

Green Bay Man Killed in Crash

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — A rural Green Bay man became Brown County's 27th traffic fatality of 1970 after being involved in a car-truck collision on U. S. 141 in the Town of Bellevue Monday night.

Pronounced dead on arrival at St Vincent Hospital about 10:30 p.m. was Harry H. Wertel, 45, Rt. 2, Green Bay. He incurred extensive head and chest injuries.

According to county police, Wertel was traveling north on 141 when a truck heading south drove left of the center line and struck the Wertel car. Police were on the scene about 9:25 p.m.

Driver of the truck was Ronald R. Holda, 29, route 2, Green Bay, who received minor facial burns when the truck burst into flames.

Oshkosh Man Will Face Four Charges

A young Oshkosh man will stand trial Jan. 6 on four misdemeanor counts brought by Outagamie County authorities early Sunday.

Michael F. Laufer, 22, entered innocent pleas before County Judge Nick F. Schaefer Monday to disorderly conduct, and three traffic counts. Bond was set at $100.

The three traffic charges, brought after he allegedly sped away from the scene of a personal injury accident on U. S. 41 northeast of Kaukauna, are hit and run, reckless driving and failure to report an accident.

County police said that Laufer was headed south on 41 about 2 a.m. when he struck the rear of an auto driven by Paul C. Volpe, 49, of 1725 S. Carpenter St., causing Volpe to lose control of the car and go into the ditch. Volpe was advised to see a doctor for treatment of possible neck injuries and a headache.

Laufer reportedly did not stop after the accident, but his car later was found eight miles farther south in the ditch along 41.

An investigator cited him for disorderly conduct after learning Laufer reportedly kicked out a door window at the Guest House Inn, 3930 W. College Ave., apparently without provocation. Police said that incident allegedly occurred shortly before 3 a.m.

Trial will held before a jury.

Lucey Favors Consolidation

Governing Proposals Aired

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Intermediate, or regional levels of government, ranging from regional planning commissions with expanded powers to metropolitan governments, were proposed to Gov. Elect Patrick J. Lucey at the budget hearing Monday on local regional and state government.

Despite numerous proposals for governments between the state and community level, Lucey indicated he does not favor the development of more agencies, but, rather the consolidation of many into few, if possible.

Dr. Raymond Vlasin, assistant chancellor at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, and Green Bay Mayor Donald Tilleman testified on their successful effort to get the state administrative districts reorganized into districts that would logically serve northeast Wisconsin.

The administrative districts ordered by Gov. Warren Knowles in 1969 provided for a division of counties in northeast Wisconsin that split several counties from those with which they normally deal. Vlasin and John Reeve of Appleton were named to a task force to study the district divisions and make recommendations for better arrangements of counties into the units that are planned to take state services into the state.

The final proposal was approved by Knowles and new districts ordered on the basis of the study.

Vlasin said the new Lake Michigan and Lake Winnebago districts have already provided study units in which to review problems and plans for the next decade. He said he hopes the new governor will put the administrative districts into operation soon.

He said the regional districts can serve to centralize local functions and services, such as utilities, equipment and data gathering to save money, and at the same time decentralize state functions.

While the northeast Wisconsin spokesmen seemed to favor the administrative district as an intermediate level of government, Milwaukee area persons spoke in behalf of metropolitan government.

Robert Jandusa, president of the Milwaukee Council, called for the preparation of a plan for a metropolitan government similar to the two-level metro organization in the Toronto, Ont. area. He called for planning, rather than study, to get the ball rolling on governmental improvement in southeast Wisconsin.

The plan he endorsed would provide for local governments and a federated metropolitan government in which officials of the community governments would hold office. The area he envisions as being in the metro would include Milwaukee, Waukesha, Ozaukee and possibly Racine counties.

Professor Martin David of the University of Wisconsin, a specialist in taxation and public finance, called for a study of the metropolitan government for the Milwaukee area. David, representing the Wisconsin Metropolitan Alliance, also favored strong regional governments for other areas of the state.

Within regions, he favored the sharing of taxes on an equalization basis that would take excess per capita valuation in some communities and deliver it to communities with lower than average valuation through a regional equalization pool.

Charles Hill, secretary of Local Affairs and Development Department, told the governor-elect that there should be a means, probably through regional governments, councils of government or metropolitan governments, for the local governments to have an influence in making state policy.

Lucey spoke out in the hearing, indicating a reluctance to favor expansion of new governments. "I am disturbed," he said, "with the freedom with which we create middle government levels." He cited the different forms of organization of the regional plan commissions, the administrative districts, the Cooperative Educational Service Agencies and the Vocational Technical and Adult Education districts as examples of the proliferation of various districts.

"I suppose it would be too simple and cute to suggest one middle level" the governor-elect said, that would consolidate all these functions. He was advised by Roger Schrantz that the administrative districts are designed to do some of the consolidation.

The other main issue discussed in the review of local and regional government was the assessor system. Suggestions ranged from the appointment of the State Department of Administration to the job of assessing all property in the state, to permitting communities to continue to appoint or elect their own assessors.

A key recommendation of the Tarr Task Force during the last legislative session was the requirement for county assessors, appointed on the basis of skill. The proposal was watered down to permit counties to hire county assessors after approving the concept by a two-third's vote. No counties have yet taken the step. Several speakers Monday asked that Lucey support a rewriting of the law to provide for a simple majority vote if he cannot support a mandatory assessor system.

Possible Gas Sickness Causes Family's Exit

A north side Appleton family was forced to evacuate its home this morning after becoming ill last night from possible carbon monoxide fumes seeping from the combustion chamber of the furnace.

The fire department rescue squad went to the Gerald Burke home, 1407 N. Meade St., after being called about 8:30 a.m. by Mrs. Burke's sister.

Mrs. Burke, 26, and her sons Paul eight, Steve, seven, and John, five, had been sick and vomiting since midnight. Authorities opened the windows to air out the home. A service man was called to check for furnace defects.

Burke was not home. He is being treated at an Appleton hospital for a hand injury recently sustained at work. A friend took the family to a hospital.

NCR Officials Added

Appleton Coated Gets New Board

Three key developments resulting from recent merger of Appleton Coated Paper Co. with National Cash Register Co., whose headquarters are in Dayton, Ohio, have been announced by Appleton Coated's president, John P. Reeve.

They include introduction of two NCR officials to the Appleton organization, naming of a new Appleton Coated board of directors, and basic organizational realignment.

As a subsidiary of NCR, Appleton Coated Paper Co. is an organizational entity assigned to NCR's Special Products Division. Heading that division as an NCR vice president and general manager is Galen J. Wilson of Dayton, who was recently elected chairman of the newly formed board of directors of Appleton Coated.

Also named to the Appleton Coated board of directors is Howard V. Lauer of Dayton, who has been appointed a vice president of Appleton Coated to head the newly formed NCR Paper Division. Lauer was formerly manager of NCR Paper Research, Technical Services and Manufacturing at Dayton. He and his staff are now located in Dayton.

Belief in Firm

"NCR's assignment of the NCR Paper area to Appleton Coated is indicative of NCR's belief in the Appleton Coated organization," Reeve stated. "In effect, this action will center the major NCR Paper activity at Appleton," he added. "This action broadens Appleton Coated's scope, for NCR Paper is an addition to our normal commercial paper operations and sphere."

Five Areas

Appleton Coated Paper Co. now will embrace five primary organizational areas, each headed by a vice president, all reporting to Reeve.

They include NCR Paper Division-Lauer; Marketing of Commercial Papers — Paul E. Truttschel, formerly Appleton Coated vice president of marketing and technical; Technical Research & Development — Thomas W. Busch, formerly Appleton Coated vice president of special products and technical; Manufacturing — Lloyd M. Swaim, formerly Appleton Coated vice president of operations; and Administration and Finance — Russler.

Under the organizational structure, all of the foregoing will exercise functional responsibility for related areas of Combined Paper Mills, the NCR subsidiary acquired in 1969.

In manufacturing, three plants will be involved — the Appleton Coated operation in Appleton, the Combined Paper Mills pulp and paper mill at Combined Locks, and the Combined Paper Mills pulp and paper mill at Roaring Spring, Pa., known as the Bare Mill.

Reeve points out that the new organization shows potential of further physical growth in Appleton and "likely future transfer of some personnel from Dayton."

"When economic conditions improve," Reeve added, "we foresee the possibility of increased manufacturing activity."

Chill Wills Gets 'Stardom' Status In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Veteran western actor Chill Wills, 69, has been given his own star in Hollywood Boulevard's sidewalk.

The two-foot, brass-outlined star is one of 1,600 implanted since 1953 along Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street by civic boosters to create a "walk of fame." Each contains in brass the name of an entertainment celebrity, past or present.

Chill's unveiled Monday in front of Graumans' Chinese Theater, is next to the late Basil Rathbone's and near the late Dick Powell's.

The leathery-faced, 6-foot-2 actor said he had been in show business since he was 11, shortly after his father gave him a guitar and he began singing at Baptist revivals around his native Seagoville, Tex.

He made his movie debut in "Boom Town," a 1939 film starring Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy, and later was the voice of Francis, the movies' talking mule. He was nominated for an Oscar in "The Alamo."

Cashier Saves State Pin Money

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Every two weeks, Ray Lansing and his staff save the state of Washington $27.80—in paper clips.

Lansing is chief cashier for the Department of Revenue. Every morning in the mail the department receives thousands of paper clips, attaching checks to cash returns.

They all go into wastepaper baskets for use by the department. It takes about two weeks to fill one.

"We give our field auditors a coffee can full," says Lansing. "They send them back with their reports."

Lansing has checked the contents of a No. 4 waste basket and found that it will hold about 46,360 paper clips. At six cents per hundred, that's $27.80.

Meany Voices U.S. Pessimism About Economy

Labor Leader Sees No Indication That Conditions Improve

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — "There is no economic upturn in sight. There hasn't been an improvement, and there is no indication there is going to be an improvement."

These are the words of AFL-CIO President George Meany, but it may be speculated that they reflect the growing feelings of millions of Americans as some of the economic statistics signal stormy weather.

And, the timing being what it is, the low state of economic activity is bound to be reflected at the polls, perhaps to a far greater degree than anybody suspected just a month ago.

Some of the more optimistic statements made by administration officials a couple of months ago are now being undermined by the facts, which of course include the unfortunate General Motors strike.

Indicators Fall

The latest index of economic indicators, which point to future economic activity, fell during September, meaning that the economy is likely to be sluggish for months to come.

The wholesale price index leveled off, but the overall figure hid a very sharp rise in the price of industrial commodities, which means continued upward pressure on the price of many manufactured goods.

And although the latest figures on unemployment may not be released until after the elections, it is felt by many business economists here that joblessness is still on the rise and may reach 6 per cent.

One indicator of future employment, the "help-wanted advertising index," compiled by the Conference Board from ads in 52 newspapers, fell last month for the seventh straight time and now is at its lowest since August 1965. It reads 162, based on 1957-1959 equalling 100.

The misfortune for the Nixon administration is that it may argue that the situation is coming under control, but its arguments are understood more by professional economists than ordinary voters.

Hopeful Sign

Paul McCracken, the President's chief economic adviser, can point to rising productivity as a hopeful sign, because any rise in output per manhour tends to reduce the upward pressure on prices.

Truly, a gain in this area was one of the most sought after goals of the administration. It is one of the most significant indications that inflation is being successfully attacked.

But there is no question at all that the promising forecast contained in this statistic carries not one-tenth the weight among the populace as the dismal outlook contained in the unemployment figures.

The administration can also argue that the General Motors strike hides the real advances toward stability, but ordinary people at election time aren't so impressed by promises as they are by existing conditions.

Speaking in London this week, Herbert Stein of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, commented:

"The press no longer bothers to inquire what the latest statistics mean for the economy; they only want to know what they mean for the election."

Heading Upward

Stein's plaint is understandable, because he feels the economy is headed toward a healthier future than the current popular statistics may indicate. But that is human nature.

He also told his audience that it is "a pleasure at this time to be here where the U.S. economy can be discussed as interesting in itself, and not as a political issue wedged in between campus unrest and pornography."

But to voters, the economy cannot be discussed as interesting in itself. It is not an academic consideration among them but a very personal and emotional one—and one on which they might attempt to have their say at the polls.

Is the concern over the economy wedged between campus unrest and pornography? Or does the political sandwich contain more of the bread and butter issues of jobs and inflation?

Judge Appointed to Troubled Family Panel

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — County Judge James G. Sarres of Winnebago County Monday asked for a seat on the financially troubled and politically beleaguered Wisconsin Home and Family Council and promptly had his wish fulfilled.

After listening to critical discussion by members of the joint Legislative Council on the financial history of the Family Council, Sarres arose to declare his conviction that the latter agency is needed to provide leadership in the resolution of critical problems of family break-up and child delinquency, and to remind the legislative leaders that he had applied for appointment to one of the vacant Council seats.

Rep. Paul Alfonsi of Minoqua, chairman of the Legislative Council nominating committee, acknowledged that he had received Sarres' request but had not considered it because of the press of other matters.

Sarres was nominated, and the Legislative Council confirmed him in a unanimous vote.

The troubled family agency was created six years ago. In recent months it has been under fire for uncontrolled expenditures, and Sarres spoke after the state auditing department had filed a report critical of its practices. It had urged strong financial controls.

The judge told the legislators: "I want to be on this Council. Maybe I'm out of my head. But we must do something to stabilize family life in this state."

He said that in his work in the juvenile branch of the Winnebago County court he had found that 50 per cent of the children brought into the court for delinquency come from broken homes and that juvenile delinquency is steadily increasing.

He said that when he was offered the county judgeship by appointment he had hesitated because he had been deeply interested in his previous work as county divorce counsel.

After the vote of confirmation, Alfonsi referred to the doubtful future of the Family Council and told Sarres:

"Maybe you can save it between now and June 30." The reference was to the probability that the 1971 legislature will refuse to authorize funding for the family agency for the next biennium, which will start July 1.

Residents Warned To Shovel Walks In Kaukauna

KAUKAUNA — With the arrival of snow, complaints are being received by aldermen and other city officials that walks are not being shoveled or are ice covered.

City ordinance requires owners or occupants to have snow and ice removed from walks in front of the premises within 48 hours after a snow or ice a ccumulation. Non-compliance with the ordinance could result in a fine and work being done by city crews at the owner's expense as a special assessment.

Property owners who have walks shoveled by city crews will be assessed at 10 cents per frontage foot, thus a 60-foot walk will be $6. Police have been instructed to arrest persons failing to comply with the ordinance.

Freeing of Enemy POWs Is Urged

Response Expectable, Griffin Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert P. Griffin, the Senate's No. 2 Republican leader, today urged the release of all sick and wounded enemy prisoners of war as well as 1,500 able-bodied captured North Vietnamese troops in hopes of securing freedom for American POWs.

"Such a dramatic, humanitarian initiative would create, worldwide, an expectation of response in kind by the Communist side," said the Michigan Republican.

Griffin said he expects the proposal to receive a sympathetic response from the Nixon administration, but emphasized he was making the proposal as a senator—not as assistant Republican leader.

"I would suggest that the prisoners be released well before Tet, the Vietnamese New Year, which comes at the end of January," he said.

"I believe it is appropriate, as the holiday season approaches, for our side to demonstrate through this dramatic and moving gesture our deep conviction, expressed by President Nixon, that all prisoners of war have suffered too much."

Griffin conferred last month with Mai Van Bo of the North Vietnamese Paris delegation in an effort to secure better treatment of American POWs and a list of their names. However, he said he has received no response from Bo.

About 1,500 men are listed as missing in action in Southeast Asia. Pentagon officials say 459 Americans are believed held captive by the North Vietnamese.

The South Vietnamese hold an estimated 8,200 North Vietnamese prisoners.

Griffin said the United States "should ask an impartial organization, like the International Red Cross, to interview the North Vietnamese and determine which men wish to return.

"I do not advocate forced repatriation," he said.

Safer Cars Help Cut Road Deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — In part because cars are safer, the nation's highway death toll will drop by 1,100 in 1970 and perhaps by 3,900 next year, says the government's auto safety chief.

"We're seeing the first significant drop in traffic fatalities since 1957," said Douglas W. Toms, director of the Transportation Department's national highway safety bureau. "Several factors account for it, nd auto improvements appear to be a major one."

Government statistics for the first eleven months and estimates for December place the 1970 death toll at 55,300, two per cent less than 1969, Toms said in an interview.

"I'm shooting for a seven per cent reduction in 1971 over 1970," he said. "That's a super-tough goal because the statisticians say we can't achieve that much."

Why the drop when American are driving more miles each year at higher speeds?

"Better roads, tougher driver licensing, programs aimed at curbing the alcoholic driver, and better driving habits are part of it," Toms said, "but safer equipment has a definite effect."

He mentioned particularly these safety changes stimulated in part by consumer advocate Ralph Nader and the 1966 Highway Safety AKCT: lap-belts, energy-absorbing steering columns, penetration-resistant windshield and padded interior.

Toms said the improved fatality figures will not mean easing pressure on automakers for additional improvement, such as the air bag crash-protection system.

"If anything I've been guilty of pushing Detroit," he said. "I have no intention of taking the heat off."

Court-Martial Rumored in Defector Case

Military Remains Silent on Report of Pending Discipline

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Herald Traveler reported today that a Coast Guard board of inquiry in Washington has recommended court-martialing "at least one high-ranking Coast Guard officer" in connection with the attempted defection of a Lithuanian seaman from a Soviet fishing vessel to a Coast Guard cutter last month.

The newspaper also quoted an unnamed source as saying that Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe, under whose jurisdiction the Coast Guard falls, had forwarded the findings to President Nixon.

The source said neither the Transportation Department nor the White House would say when the report would be made public or whether action would be taken on it.

No Recommendation

A department spokesman in Washington, however, said a board of review which has the inquiry under consideration has not made any recommendation.

The board report, which includes testimony from 28 persons, was concluded Monday and given to Adm. C. R. Bender, Coast Guard commandant.

The incident occurred off Martha's Vineyard when the Lithuanian, Simas Kudirka, attempted to defect from his ship to the cutter Vigilant while Russian and American representatives were holding a conference on fishing rights. He was eventually taken by the Russians back to the Soviet ship after spending several hours aboard the Vigilant.

Three Coast Guard officers were relieved of duty "without prejudice" during the investigation. They are Rear Adm. William B. Ellis, commander of the 1st Coast Guard District in Boston, Capt. Fletcher W. Brown, 1st District chief of staff, and Cmdr Ralph W. Eustis, captain of the Vigilant.

The board of inquiry held 10 days of hearings in Boston and Washington behind closed doors.

250 Thought Dead In Ferry Sinking

SEOUL (AP) — More than 250 South Koreans were feared drowned today in the sinking of a ferryboat in the Korea Strait.

The Namyung Ho, with 256 passengers and 20 crewmen aboard, went down on its 14-hour run between Cheju Island, south of the Korean peninsula, and the southern Korean port of Pusan.

Japanese ships picked up eight survivors, and a Korean police patrol boat picked up three others. A Korean fishing vessel reported picking up a 12th survivor who was taken to a hospital in Pusan.

A Korean police plane reported sighting two persons clinging to debris, and a Korean police officer who flew over the area said he saw oil slicks and floating wood.

Rescue Delayed

Maritime authorities said they feared most of the boat's occupants had perished, however, because the rescue operation was delayed and the weather was very cold.

Transportation Ministry officials said they believed the boat sank because she was overloaded. In addition to the 276 persons aboard, they said, the 263-ton vessel carried about 250 tons of cargo.

Police said a preliminary investigation indicated that the ship had also left Cheju Island without the skipper aboard.

The ferry went down between 1:30 and 8 a.m., but Korean authorities were not aware of the sinking until around noon, when they heard news dispatches from Japan quoting Japan's Maritime Safety Agency. The agency's office in Kitakyushu, southern Japan, said it learned of the sinking from radio messages from other ships in the area.

The Japanese agency assigned four of its patrol vessels to help Korean boats and planes in the search. Several Japanese fishing boats also joined the operation. The U.S. Air Force sent two C130 rescue planes from Yokota Air Base in Japan and a helicopter from Osan Air Base near Seoul.

Police said the ferry passenger s included many merchants on their way to Pusan and some tourists returning to the mainsid the weather was very calm, with only two-foot waves. The water was some 250 feet deep where the boat went down.

At least eight Korean ferryboat sinkings resulting in losses of lives have been reported in the past 20 yea s. The worst was in January 1953, when the Changkyung Ho sank and 330 persons drowned.

The most disastrous postwar Japanese ferry sinking was in September 1954, when a 4,337-ton ship sank in a typhoon off Hakodate, in northern Japan, with a loss of 1,712 lives.

Seaborg Named To Science Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, has been named the new president of The American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Seaborg's election by the AAAS board of directors came in the wake of controversy over whether the man who heads a large government agency should head an independent organization. Questions had also been raised about his appointment because of what Science magazine said is an identification in the public mind of the agency with pollution and nuclear bombs.

Science magazine is the official weekly of the 130,000-member association.

Dat Was Just A Hoax, Folks

RAMSGATE, England — Dat wasn't a Dat after all.

A pet store owner who claimed he had produced "dats" by mating a dog and a cat has admitted it was all a hoax.

The story got started when Roy Tutt placed an ad in a newspaper stating: "Half cat — half dog. Offers invited." When newsmen arrived he insisted that the strange-looking animals were a cross between a cat and a dog.

Tutt admitted the animals were "nothing more than mongrel puppies which cost me 60 cents each."

House Challenges Courts With Order on Speaker List

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has ordered public distribution of a revised report on campus "radical orators"—and prohibited a federal judge or anyone else from interfering.

A formal House resolution, which some observers said could tip off an unprecedented constitutional battle between Congress and federal courts, was passed Monday 302-54.

The measure bars anyone, including U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell who enjoined official publication of the original report, from blocking the new one, which is essentially the same.

The House Internal Security Committee says 57 members or supporters of revolutionary, radical or Communist organizations were paid $102,668 for 142 campus speeches. Chairman Richard H. Ichord, D-Mo., said some of the speakers "promote violence and destruction."

Congress Power

Ichord called Gesell's order the first court suppression of an official legislative report in English or American history and said the House resolution would "assert, demand and insist" on Congress' constitutional power over its own affairs.

He said he has never considered the report itself to have the same "earthshaking significance" he attributes to Gesell's order.

Opponents, including Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said the aim of the report is "to stultify campus discussion" by blacklisting the speakers and backed Gesell's ruling that it thus violates the speaker' constitutional free speech rights.

Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill., said the House resolution could force "a disastrous confrontation between the courts and Congress that statesmen have been trying to avoid for 200 years."

Ichord replied the purpose of putting out a new report rather than legislating against interference with the old one was to avoid just that.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which won Gesell's order against the original report, said it had not decided whether to press a confrontation by asking the courts to prohibit publication of the new report as well.

"At this point, we plan no precipitous action," said ACLU's Washington director Lawrence Speiser. "Congress engaged in a flurry of ill-considered actions today and I just don't know what the impact on the case will be."

U.S. Public Printer A.N. Spence, enjoined by Gesell's order from publishing the original report, said he is an employe of Congress, not the courts, and will publish the new report.

"I do what my boss tells me to do," Spence said. "It's as simple as that."

GNP Reaches $1 Trillion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saddled by inflation and spurred by a fast-paced growth over the last decade, the nation's economy reached a $1-trillion rate today.

The official estimate for the exact moment was noon EST, with President Nixon marking the occasion by unveiling a new Gross National Product clock that ticks off the estimated GNP rate minute by minute.

The President, however, was only commemorating an annual rate of growth in the GNP, which measures the nation's output of goods and services in terms of current dollars.

The money GNP has doubled in the last 10 years, whereas in pre-World War days it took an average of 25 years for the money output to double.

But the money GNP is deceiving.

While real output has stepped up markedly since the early 1950s, so has inflation. Prices have increased by about 50 per cent in that time.

It will be some time before the nation's real output, measured in terms of noninflationary 1958 dollars, will reach the $1-trillion mark.

During the third-quarter period that ended Sept. 30, the "real GNP" moved up to $727 5 billion; growing at the rate of $2.6 billion in that quarter. However, the money GNP—figured in current dollars—grew at the rate of $15 billion in the same period, to $985 billion. Part of that was attributable to inflation.

Thus, the new GNP clock will not only tick off the nation's output, it will mark any continuing inflation—minute by minute

Nixon Hopes to Quiet Democrats With Connally Appointment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has tapped former Texas Gov. John B. Connally as his new Treasury secretary in what is seen as a political move to blunt Democratic criticism of the administration's economic policies.

With the economy looming as a major issue in the 1972 presidential campaign, Nixon coupled announcement of Connally's appointment Monday with a call for a bipartisan approach to the nation's economic troubles.

A conservative Democrat and three-time governor of Texas, Connally brings a political and legal background to the Treasury job, normally filled by bankers, and gives the administration a stronger voice in dealing with Congress.

Ambassador-at-Large

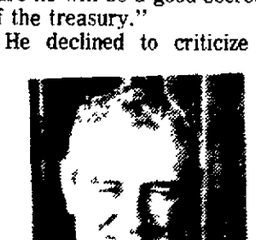

David M. Kennedy, the 65-year-old Chicago banker who held the Treasury post for two years, resigned effective Feb. 1 to make room for Connally. Nixon named Kennedy an ambassador-at-large in the State Department, with Cabinet seat and responsibility in interational finance.

Administration sources said Connally, secretary of the Navy under former President John F. Kennedy, will be counted on to use his political talents in selling Nixon's economic policies to the public and improving the President's relations with a Democratic Congress.

Both were acknowledged weaknesses of Kennedy, who was in disfavor with the administration's economic policymakers and wanted a less demanding job.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana told newsmen he was completely surprised by Connally's selection. But Mansfield said Connally "is a good man" and "I'm sure he will be a good secretary of the treasury."

He declined to criticize the

conservative Connally and said Senate Democrats have always been willing to cooperate with the Republican administration on economic issues.

But whether Nixon achieved a political coup in naming Connally remains to be seen. At Sun Valley, Idaho, where Republican governors are meeting, the reaction was largely unhappy.

"It was just incredible," Gov. Francis Sargent of Massachusetts said. "Can he add? I don't mind him appointing a Democrat—but Connally?"

"I thought there were a lot of unemployed Republican governors who could have been appointed instead of an unemployed Democratic governor," said lame-duck Gov. David F. Cargo of New Mexico. "I suspect it was a political appointment and that may be the understatement of the year."

Gov. John A. Love of Colorado said, "I don't understand going to a bipartisan approach all of a sudden."

In Texas, the appointment was seen as a possible political reward for Connally's help in defeating Sen. Ralph Yarborough, a liberal, in the Democratic primary, and as a move to build votes for GOP candidates in Texas.

Yarborough said Connally got the job "to reward the party faithful." And the state's Republican national committeeman, Peter O'Donnell, said it assures Nixon of carrying Texas in 1972, and carrying GOP Sen. John Tower in with him.

Paul Samuelson, Nobel prize-winning economist, called the appointment "surprising in the sense that Connally is not know to have had a great deal of previous experience in the field of economics and finance."

In general, however, the financial community reacted favorably to Connally's appointment.

Banker's Thoughts

New York banker Gabriel Hauge, once mentioned as a possible Kennedy successor, said he doesn't think the appointment indicates any change in administration fiscal and monetary policies.

"One can only speculate that the President wants to strengthen his capability in his fiscal relations with Congress," Hauge said.

With economic policymaking largely centered in the White House, the Treasury job has become mainly a figurehead position under Nixon.

But the post can be important in relations with Congress, and in improving the administration's economic image.

Sen Tower said Connally is "philosophically attuned" to the President and "singularly qualified for this post."

"I'm told," a Treasury spokesman said, "that he has all the abilities of Lyndon Johnson with the drawbacks removed."

Rep Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said he hopes Connally "will face forthrightly the need to use moral suasion to require big banks and big business to operate in the public interest."

LBJ Associate

"At a minimum," Patman added, "I hope that the appointee, who is a close associate of former President Johnson, will put an end to Nixon administration efforts to blame prior administrations for the nation's economic ills."

During the 1970 elections, the Nixon administration blamed the nation's economic troubles on past policies of the Democrats.

With unemployment high and inflation continuing, Democrats effectively used the economy issue in several states.

After the election, Kennedy went to Nixon and offered himself as a scapegoat for the failure of the economy and its impact on the election.

Nixon replied he had no one else in mind for the post, a Treasury spokesman said, and Kennedy left for an 11-day European tour while White House sources leaked out the word he would be the next Cabinet member to go.

Shooting Death Ruled Justifiable

The killing of a burglary suspect by an Appleton policeman during a stakeout of Xavier High School late Saturday night has been ruled justifiable homicide.

Outagamie County Coroner Bernard H. Kemps, investigating the circumstances surrounding the death of Richard Martin Eickhoff, 42, Madison, made the decision after an investigation with the district attorney's office.

The ruling is contained in a three-page statement. Kemps said that the statement was prepared after he and Dist. Atty. James Long questioned participating police officials Monday nght.

School Staked Out

Eickhoff was fatally wounded about 11:40 p.m. Saturday when pellets from a shotgun blast from a veteran Appleton police officer struck him in the chest. Another suspect, Harry Mueller, 28, Madison, was also hit by gunfire, but he lived.

Authorities, acting on a tip supplied by an informer, staked out Xavier, 1600 W. Prospect Ave., about 9 p.m. The informer furnished them with facts detailing burglaries at the high school, and another which was supposed to take place the same night at nearby St. Bernard Catholic Church. Eickhoff and Mueller did, police said, strike at the church, but they left. From there, police said, the pair went to Xavier with the intention of burglary.

Shortly after 11:30 p.m., one of four police officers hiding in the office area of the school where the vault is kept ordered the pair to halt.

The informer had warned that the men might be armed, but they weren't that night. On orders to halt, the two men crouched, as though to go for concealed weapons. At least two shots were fired, one wounding Eickhoff and pellets from either that shot or another hitting Mueller, causing a chest wound which hospitalized him.

Informer's Warning

In the statement prepared Monday night by Kemps and Long, it was revealed that the police department had been told that the two men were armed and had bragged about killing two policemen. Police were informed that if the men were caught, they would not hesitate to shoot it out with authorities. One of the individuals, in fact, had been involved in a shootout with police in southern Wisconsin, where two were wounded and hospitalized.

At 11:28 p.m. Saturday, the report says, police inside the school heard one of the doors being pried open. Minutes later, the officers observed two men crawling along the floor toward the safe.

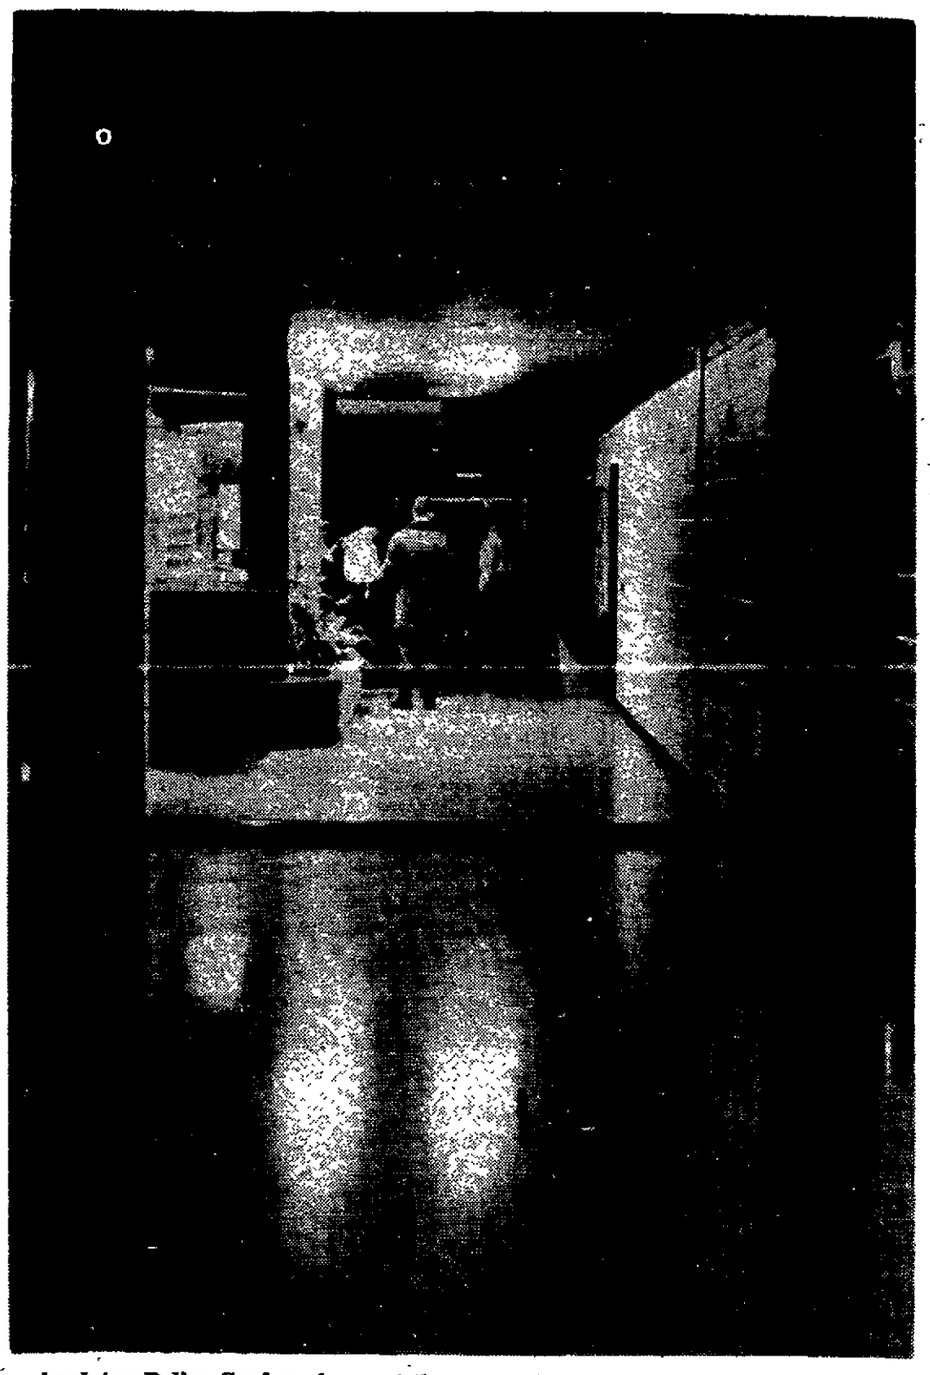

As the pair crawled, according to the statement, they were overheard discussing the location of the safe. One of them directed the other to check for an alarm. More talk centered around finding a possible point of escape from the building.

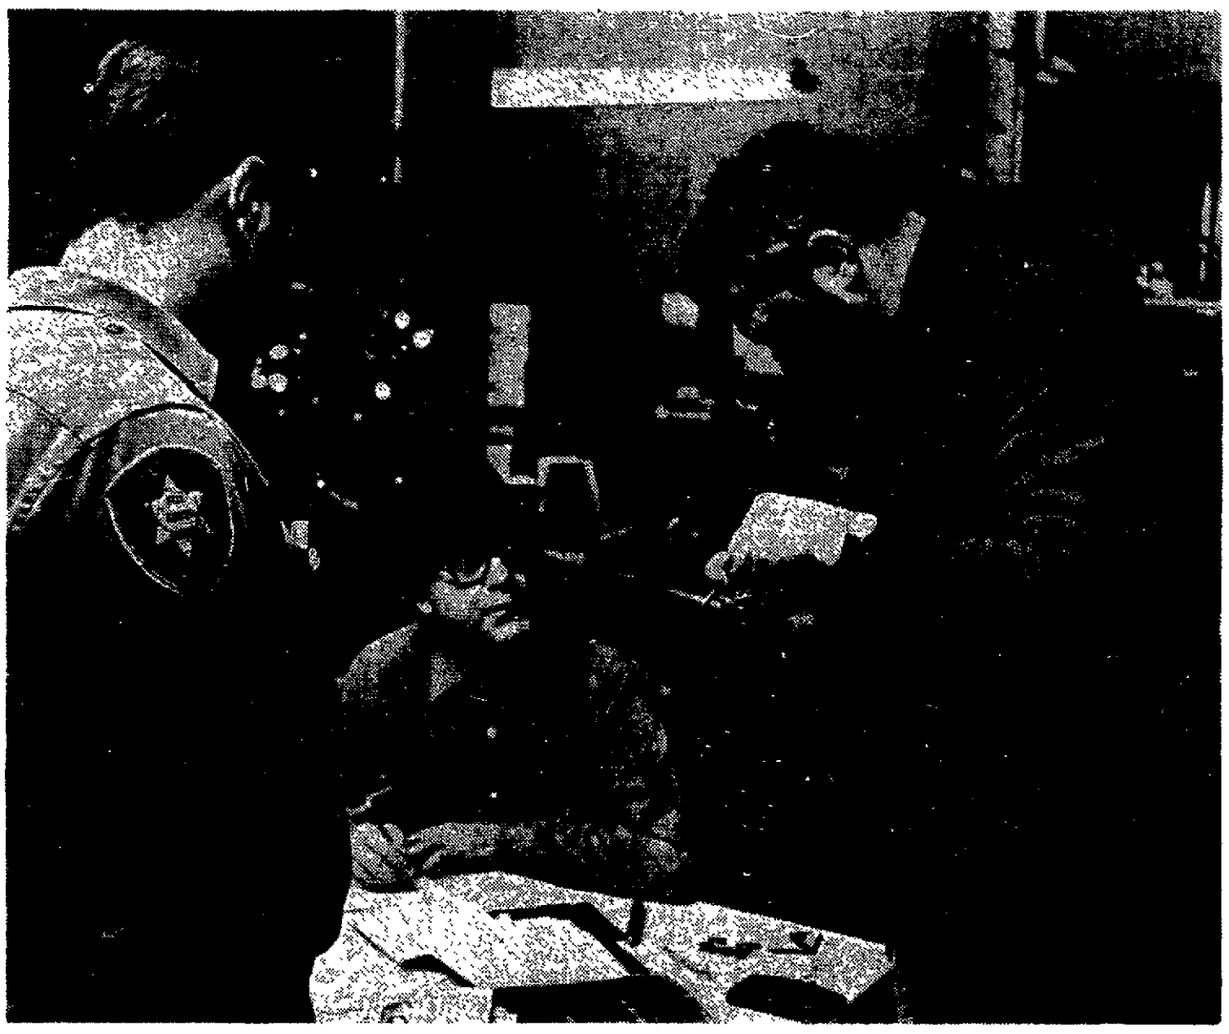

The two men were seen wearing stocking caps dark clothing and gloves.

Extreme Caution

Additionally, the statement said, one other individual entered the building shortly before the alleged burglars. Police officers identified the person as no burglar, indicating they exercised extreme caution that no innocent persons would become involved. Long earlier said that a teacher had entered the

Both Men Shot at Xavier Had Records With Police

Both men shot by Appleton police in Xavier High School Saturday night had criminal records, it was learned Monday.

Richard M. Eickhoff, 42, who was killed had the longest record, dating back to when he was 12 years old. The record includes several convictions for burglary and assault.

Because Harry Mueller, 28, apparently will survive his injuries and may stand trial, his criminal record cannot be detailed on grounds it could prejudice his legal proceedings.

However, it was learned that in 1964 Mueller was sentenced to 11 years in the state prison for an offense in Waukesha County that was similar to what occurred in Appleton Saturday night.

A Waukesha County policeman said Monday that Mueller and a Pewaukee man one night burglarized a store that was staked out by police who had been tipped off by an informant.

The men reportedly were attempting to open a safe in the store when they were frightened by car lights. The Pewaukee man shot two policemen before he was shot. The policemen were not seriously injured.

Mueller, according to police, kept running and was taken into custody about three hours later at a friend's house. Police said he was armed. He was charged with attempted murder and burglary. The Pewaukee man is still in prison serving a term brought on the Waukesha County charge. Mueller was paroled before he served the full sentence.

The information Appleton police received concerning Eickhoff's record lists convictions only through 1964. His record, if he has one, since 1964 has not yet been fully determined, police explained.

The latest entry on Mueller's record was made in August, 1970, police learned.

Eickhoff's first brush with the law was in 1940 when he was apprehended for shoplifting. The same year, he was placed on probation for 10 counts of shoplifting.

Police also revealed that between 1942 and 1964, Eickhoff's offenses included running away from home, numerous burglaries, auto larceny, contributing to the delinquency of a minor, drunk and disorderly, assault and battery to a police officer, carrying a concealed weapon, attempt to escape, assault with intent to rob, vagrancy, lewd and lascivious behavior and receiving stolen property.

Eickhoff has served several terms in county jails, the Wisconsin State Reformatory at Green Bay and the State Prison at Waupun, police said Monday.

He also has been on state probation and on at least one occasion was returned to prison because he violated his parole.

Most of his offenses occurred in Wisconsin — chiefly in Milwaukee, Madison and Appleton — but two of them were traced to Laramie, Wyo., and Charlotte, N. C.

On at least one occasion — 1950 — Eickhoff was committed, by a court, to Central State Hospital for 30 days mental observation.

Police said Monday that prior to Saturday's incident, they knew the names of the would-be burglars and had what they considered to be reliable information that both men might be armed and that they had been in previous trouble.

However, police said they did not know the full extent of the men's records until Monday.

$60 Taken In Robbery By Gunman

A stocky man armed with a .38 caliber pistol, wearing a snow mask and scarf over his face, robbed a far northwest side service station of about $60 early Monday then fled on foot after tying the attendent up in a restroom.

Outagamie County investigators said the robbery took place about 4 a.m. at the Clark Service Station, 2010 W. Wisconsin Ave.

They were told the man arrived on foot from the west, and wore green work clothes. The man was described as weighing 200 pounds, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, with blue eyes.

No other information was immediately available. It was believed he may have driven off in an automobile parked some distance from the service station.

Police Chief of Clintonville on State Committee

CLINTONVILLE — Police Chief James Beggs has been appointed to serve on the Fourth-Class Cities' Committee of the Wisconsin Chiefs of Police Association by Elmer A. Madson, president-elect, Wisconsin Chiefs of Police Association. Madson is chief at Green Bay.

The committee members from the districts include chiefs William Ciske, Fort Atkinson, chairman; Joseph Cerniglia, Middleton; Charles Johnson, Jefferson; Melvin Jurss, Ripon; Beggs, Raymond McGinnis, Chetek, and Harold Bradford, Prescott.

"This is an important, active committee and by State Constitution must have a member from each district in the state," Madson said.

New Firm Given Nod

Clintonville OKs Industrial Plan

CLINTONVILLE — Favorable action on proposed industrial development within the city was taken by the City Council at a special meeting Monday.

Mayor Frank Sinkewicz told the council that there is a probability of having a poultry plant located in the plant now occupied by Converting, Inc., on River Street, if the city would make sewer and water facilities available. He said that the firm probably would employ a sizable number of people, and that the name of the firm has to be withheld at this time.

City Atty. Ralph Lauer said the facilities have to be inspected by the State of Wisconsin, and before such inspection, wants to know if the city will permit its use for a chicken processing plant and that the sewage will be handled by the city.

Unanimous Vtoe

Council voted unanimously to make such facilities available to the firm.

Greater Clintonville, Inc., No. 2 (GC2), is a publicly subscribed corporation which originally built the 100 by 130 feet plant now occupied by Converting, a paper converting firm, for the Wright Broiler Co. in the early 1960's. The building was turned back to GC2 by the Wright Company when it discontinued its processing operations.

Converting, Inc., has been working with GC2 in seeking this new industry, Mayor Sinkewicz said, and should arrangements be consummated, GC2 will construct a building in the city's industrial park on which Converting, Inc., presently has an option. Completion date for construction of the building would be Feb. 15.

To facilitate matters, council authorized the board of public works to advertise for sewer and water installation on this land.

Discuses Plans

Emil Kuehl, president of GC2, appeared before the council to discuss the possibility of having this new firm locate in Clintonville; and if it does, of providing Converting, Inc., with a new building, which would be leased to it by GC2.

Kuehl also said later that a stockholders' meeting of GC2 will be called as soon as possible to take action on this proposed project.

The council adopted a resolution for the city to sell GC2 8.3 acres of land, for $1,000 per acre, on which Converting, Inc., now has an option, for construction of a building for the paper firm at a cost of approximately $80,000. Payment would be by promisory note secured by a mortgage subject to a first mortgage not to exceed $35,000. The note is to bear interest of 6-½ per cent per annum, with the principal and interest to be paid monthly over a period of about nine years. The interest would be computed first and the balance applied on the principal.

A motion was approved by the council to provide a temporary access for this industrial development as this property does not have a street to it now.

Judge Dismisses Case Involving Hunting Incident

WAUPACA — The six-man jury trial set for Monday in County Court Branch 2, to hear the case of Kenneth Block, Milwaukee, was dismissed after Block's attorney, Roland Steinle Jr., Milwaukee, and Stephen Hansen, assistant district attorney, concluded their opening statements.

Block was charged with disorderly conduct for an incident on White Lake, Town of Royalton, Oct. 10. The criminal complaint had been filed by Ward L. Fox, 512 E. Lake St., Waupaca, and his duck hunting companion, Robert Donaldson, 710 S. Main St., Waupaca.

The complaint stated that the two, shortly after entering an unoccupied duck blind were threatened with a crowbar and obscenities by Block, who entered afterwards.

The case was dismissed by Judge Nathan Wiess, when he was advised of an agreement between counsels.

Girl Struck by Auto Will See Physician

A young Appleton pedestrian, who was struck by an automobile on W. Winnebago Street Monday afternoon, will consult a physician for back pain, and facial bruises.

Appleton police said that Bonnie M. Uhlenbrauch, 15, 819 W. Taylor St., sustained the injuries when she was struck in the 1500 block of W. Winnebago by a car driven by Barbara L. Kramer, 17, 913 N. Harriman St.

Miss Kramer told authorities she was westbound when she approached a group of pedestrians. She sounded her horn, and braked, but slid on icy pavement into the Uhlenbrauch girl.

Surveyor Opinion Promised

A legal opinion has been promised within two weeks as to what Outagamie County's responsibility is toward the county surveyor's office.

County Administrator Alvin Woehler told the board's Finance Committee Monday that acting Corporation Counsel A. W. Ponath has received an opinion from the attorney general's office but wanted time to research the cases cited by the opinion.

The attorney general's view, Woehler said, was that the law was very unclear open to several interpretations.

The county budgeted $1,500 for the surveyor's office, the minimum amount spelled out in the law, but, depending on the interpretation, could be faced with having to come up with another $30,000 or more.

The law also spells out that at least 5 per cent of the survey markers in the county must be replaced each year. The Surveyors Association recommended fee schedule is $192 per day for the three-man team that would be necessary to relocate each marker.

Supv. Jerome Hiler, Appleton, said an answer was needed soon. "We are at least morally obligated to tell him (the county surveyor) his status," he said.

Supv. Marvin Babbitt, Seymour, agreed but said there was nothing more than a moral obligation to him. "It was the surveyor's association that lobbied for the law," he said. "It was for their own selfish interests, not to do the counties any favors."

Red Cross Chapter At Clintonville Receives Award

CLINTONVILLE — Jim Lindow, chairman of the American Red Cross chapter level was presented with a plaque recognizing Clintonville's 100 per cent fulfillment of the Cecila Disaster Quota. The award was given at a Pere Marquette Division meeting at Fond du Lac Thursday.

Though not represented at this meeting, the New London and Waupaca Red Cross chapters also were recognized for meeting their Cecila quotas.

V. J. Wadleigh, vice chairman, and Glenn Giersbach also atterded the meeting at Fond du Lac. They went to the general session where volunteer recruitment, fund raising, disaster relief, service to military families, and other programs of Red Cross were discussed.

Lindow attended a session on the Multi Media System of teaching first aid, conducted by Skip Udlock, division safety director.

At this meeting and one held in Iron Mountain on Dec. 11, 28 of the 41 chapters in the division were represented. Approximately 70 persons met at the Fond du Lac meeting.

Law Student Wins Post

Chilton's Thomas Fox Is Assembly Clerk

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Thomas P. Fox, youthful third-generation member of a family of Chilton Democratic party activists, will be responsible for the housekeeping of the 1971 Wisconsin State Assembly when it convenes under Democratic party control on Jan. 18.

The 24-year-old University of Wisconsin law student Monday was chosen chief clerk of the lower house of the legislature to replace Wilmer Struebing, of Brillion, who was head of the records department there during the last two legislative sessions.

Fox won support of a majority of the Democratic state representatives at a closed caucus that also chose William Quick, a 61-year-old Milwaukee political figure, as sergeant-at-arms to relace Louis Romell of Adams, who served in that office under the Republican Assembly majority in the last two legislatures.

Continue Studies

Fox said that he hopes to be able to continue law school studies this winter and during the spring semester, if he can adjust his class schedule to his state capitol work requirements.

The two hired officers of the Assembly are paid about $10,000 a year, plus perquisites that follow the general pattern of allowances authorized for elected members of the legislature.

Both had several rivals in their bids for election, but the names of the other contenders and the precise results of the balloting were not made public.

The new assembly clerk is a son of the late Jerome P. Fox, who served in the Assembly nearly 40 years ago and was floor leader there for the Democrats who won a majority of the seats in the Democratic landslide of 1932. Later he was an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for governor and served as chairman of the state party committee. He also was a lawyer. Leo P. Fox, grandfather of the new Assembly clerk, was the Democratic party nominee for lieutenant governor in 1928.

Fox was an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination for secretary of state in last fall's primary election

County Income Tax Proposed to Lucey

MADISON (AP)—Democratic Gov.-Elect Patrick J. Lucey heard an appeal Monday for adoption of legislation permitting counties to levy a "piggy-back" income tax.

William H. Beyer of Racine, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Alliance of Cities, told Lucey the measure is needed to enable local governments to relieve property taxes.

"The cities have had it with the property tax," Beyer declared.

Beyer was one of the first witnesses at the fourth of Lucey's budget hearings on state agency requests for a record $2.2 billion in spending proposals for the 1971-73 biennium.

Lucey asked Beyer why the Alliance preferred a piggy-back tax on income rather than sales taxes.

"Everything is geared to earnings," Beyer said. "People with only Social Security or other low incomes would be hurt more with a sales tax."

Under Beyer's proposal, which he said will be submitted to the 1971 legislature, counties could enact a surtax up to 50 per cent of what the state taxes on income.

Lt. Gov.-Elect Martin Schreiber said he was "plagued" by the possibility that enactment of the surtax would discourage business from locating in an area.

"We all frankly feel that if local problems are going to be resolved, it must be we at the local level who do the problem solving," Beyer said.

"We do support the concept of tax reform in Wisconsin," he added, "and will attempt the introduction of bills in this regard in the new session—not because we desire to take money away from some of those who have to meet our present needs, but to adjust the refunds which we do receive to make them more in line with the local needs."

Lucey said that while some tax measures may be necessary, "it is my belief that I cannot ask the citizens of this state to bear an additional tax burden without assuring myself that every effort is being made to eliminate barriers to the efficient and effective response that citizens have a right to expect from their state government."

Regardless of how much of the $2 2 billion budget is finally approved, Lucey said, "the individual citizen has a right to expect that required services are available to him."

Man Hurt After Auto Is Hit by Freight Train

A 25-year-old Green Bay man reportedly sustained a severe head injury Monday when his auto was demolished by a passing freight train at a crossing north of Appleton.

Outagamie County authorities said that John Funk received a laceration to the scalp, cut to his right hand and that he complained of back pain. They said Funk was traveling east on Capitol Drive, about one-half mile east of County Trunk A, when he apparently slid on packed, ice-covered snow into the path of a Soo Line freight train going north.

The impact flattened the auto. Funk was taken to Appleton Memorial Hospital.

Clintonville Asks For Snow Removal

CLINTONVILLE — The City Council has made a formal request to Waupaca County for snow removal service for the city. The resolution was the result of a special 5 p m meeting on Monday.

Mayor Frank Sinkewicz said the city had reduced its snow plowing budget 50 per cent with the expectation that the county would provide snow removal services for the city. He commented that with the county expenditures for its winter maintenance program of over $189,000 and with Clintonville paying approximately 15 per cent of the county budget, the city is paying more than $25,000 without getting any benefit.

The resolution states, "Such snow removal service to include streets other than state highways and county trunks within the city: It is requested that such snow removal be at timely intervals following snow falls requiring such service Failure to provide the requested service will require the city to perform that service with a bill to Waupaca County"

Rules Confuse Power Crisis

By JEAN HELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United states is entering an era of nationwide energy shortages with the government's system of fuel and power regulation so disjointed and inconsistent that it is nearly impossible to respond to problems before they become crises.

There is no pattern to regulation of the nation's energy industries. Natural gas and electric utilities are regulated by both the Federal Power Commission and state governments. The oil industry is regulated in part by presidential proclamation, in part by the Interior Department, in part by individual states. The coal industry, for the most part, is not regulated at all.

A nationwide Associated Press study has found:

—Over the past decade, practically unnoticed, the energy industry has become a near-monopoly with major oil companies moving to take control of gas, coal and uranium production. The Federal Trade Commission and the Justice Department's Antitrust Division only recently expressed mild interest in the situation.

—The Federal Power Commission admits its own cumbersome procedures helped heighten the natural gas shortage. While working to get gas production moving again, the FPC could do little more than announce it would draw up priorities for gas and electric utilities spelling out which customers should have service cut off first.

—For years, the FPC regulation of natural gas rates has been aimed at keeping prices down. At the same time, state regulation of domestic oil production has been directed at keeping prices up. The two products frequently come from the same fields. The FPC admits "an element of inconsistency" in the policies.

Import Restrictions

—Import restrictions designed to keep the United States from becoming overly dependent on foreign petroleum products were lifted five years ago for fuel oil. The United States promptly became overly dependent on foreign fuel oil. When foreign supplies were interrupted, the nation found it had no way to fill the gap.

—While many electric utility companies struggle to find enough coal to get through the winter months, the nation's coal producers are selling $900 million worth of coal every year to foreign customers. Federal authorities have ruled out the possibility of imposing export controls for the time being on the grounds that the foreign money is vital to the nation's balance of payments situation.

Cries of Conspiracy

The current fuel shortages have given rise to cries of conspiracy on the part of the nation's fuel producers. Members of Congress and spokesmen for some electric utility organizations have charged that oil companies deliberately held down domesic fuel oil supplies until prices soared to record high levels, that gas exploration was cut to create artificial shortages and give gas producers leverage to shed the regulatory bonds of the FPC, and that the expanding oil companies have moved toward monopoly to manipulate supplies of all fuels to their profit advantage.

Industry sources adamantly deny such charges, but the fact is that fuel producers are getting higher prices, that regulatory limitations are easing and the monopoly trend in the energy fields is continuing unchecked.

The cause may not be conspiracy so much as it is federal regulatory failings.

When oil companies began referring to themselves as total energy companies several years ago, it wasn't just an advertising gimmick. Of the 22 largest oil companies in the country, all have a stake in natural gas production, 11 own coal interests and 18 are involved in uranium production.

Oil and gas production fall together naturally because they so frequently are disocvered and tapped together. But the big oil companies now also have control of an estimated 20 per cent of the nation's coal producing capacity and 80 per cent of uranium production.

The oil companies' uranium interests are particularly significant in view of Atomic Energy Commission estimates that by the year 2000 nuclear power will account for 52 per cent of the nation's electrical generating capacity.

Monopoly Denied

Oil company spokesmen deny there is any monopoly tendency in their expansion. They insist the energy field remains intensely competitive and the reason for diversification is to provid oil companies with a cushion against the day domestic oil fields dry up.

Some are not convinced.

"Oil and gas companies are experts at manipulating energy prices and they're getting their hands on larger and larger shares of the total energy market," said Alex Radin, general manager of the American Public Power Association. "If prices for fuel keep going up, it's just going to wipe out small utility companies that can't afford to pay the price."

Many of the utilities represented by APPA use fuel oil to fire their electrical generators. Many of these utilities are reporting increases of 200 per cent and more on fuel oil contracts signed since January.

Residual Fuel

Several U.S. oil companies, among them Gulf, Standard of New Jersey and Texaco, have announced they will shift the yields of their refineries to produce as much as 200,000 more barrels of residual fuel a day. day.

"I'm not sure they can produce enough to fill the need," Radin said. "They waited until late in the fall to decide to try. They waited until fuel oil prices went through the roof and they could make a nice profit on what used to be a waste product they couldn't sell."

Oil industry sources reject such charges of opportunism.

"Producing more fuel oil meant producing less gasoline and jet fuel and other profitable petroleum products," said Vincent Brown, executive director of the National Petroleum Council. "Refiners had to wait on fuel oil production until they knew they could sell it."

But the fact that fuel oil users had to scramble for winter supplies points up the fruits of vascillation in federal regulatory procedures.

In a 1959 proclamation, President Eisenhower imposed a quota system strictly limiting foreign petroleum imports. The purpose was to prevent the nation from becoming overly dependent on cheaper foreign supplies that could be cut off at the whim of an unfriendly government.

Foreign Sources

In 1966, with domestic refineries producing less and less fuel oil, all restrictions on fuel oil imports were lifted. Within a few years, 93.7 per cent of all fuel oil used on the East Coast came from foreign sources.

Then, as was feared might happen in 1959, international politics crimped the foreign supply line. Fuel oil imports couldn't meet the demand, and prices soared.

The natural gas supply situation is just as confused.

The federal Power Commission sets ceilings on the price which natural gas producers can charge interstate pipeline companies. In past years, with supplies plentiful, the FPC set the ceiling low. As inflation grew, so did gas producers' costs for equipment and labor. Gradually costs closed in on profits, but no immediate rate ceiling increases were approved by the FPC.

Dry Wells

The producers claim that without increased rate ceilings, their profit margins were not great enough to attract the capital for further exploration, a high-risk business where at least 80 per cent of the wells drilled each year turns up dry.

"In the past two years, the natural gas situation in this country changed drastically," said FPC economist Haskel Wald. "Until two years ago, our capacity to produce gas was far greater than our demand for gas. There was plenty to go around. But when costs went up, profits, incentive and exploration fell off and we used up our cushion."

Wald said the FPC is now studying possible rate increases. But he conceded, "our mechanism for change is slow. In this current situation, events just overtook our ability to respond to them."

There have been accusations that gas producers understated the extent of their discoveries to make the shortage look worse than it is and lend weight to their fight for higher rate ceilings.

The FPC discounts this possibility and gas producers deny it. But the FPC has no way to be certain. All surveys done on the extent of the nation's gas reserves are compiled by gas producers themselves. The FPC has no procedure for independent review of those reports.

Telephones of Federal Units Are Monitored

52 U.S. Agencies Have Wiretaps for Recording Calls

WASHINGTON (AP) — When you telephone any of 52 federal agencies, someone may be eavesdropping and at least nine agencies may not tell you about it, a House report says.

The nine agencies range from the supersecret Central Intelligence Agency to the Peace Corps, but not the FBI, the government's domestic investigation unit.

A report of the House government information subcommittee said the FBI and seven other agencies told the panel they prohibit monitoring citizens' telephone calls.

The 52 agencies have 4,790 "snooper buttons," the report said, only they don't like to call them that anymore.

The report said the buttons which cut out breathing and other noise for the person "listening in surreptitiously or otherwise" are now called push-to-talk switches.

168 Recorders

The agencies also use 168 telephone conversation recording machines, 92 of them permanently wired into telephone circuits, the report said, and 147 attachments on phones to record or eavesdrop on conversations.

The listeners are usually secretaries, callers are usually told someone else is on the line and the avowed purpose of the widespread practice is simply to get straight the caller's request or information, said subcommittee Chairman John E. Moss, D-Calif.

"It remains a fact," Moss said, "that until the practice of monitoring is abolished, a citizen will never be able to know for sure to what extent or for what underlying motive he is unwittingly sharing his telephone calls with silent listeners."

Navy Leads

The Navy leads the field in "snooper buttons" with 1,004, the State Department has 835 and the Defense Department 633, the report said, but most agencies have only a few.

While most agencies say they tell the caller he is being monitored, the report said, seven require the warning only if the conversation is being taken down word for word.

Besides the CIA and Peace Corps, these are Commerce and Treasury departments, Farm Credit Administration, Federal Reserve System and Canal Zone Government, the report said.

It said the Housing and Urban Development and Transportation departments are not required to disclose a secretary is listening if the conversation involves "national security."

The eavesdropping devices cost the taxpayers about $137,000 a year, the report said.

Today in History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday Dec. 15, the 349th day of 1970. There are 16 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1791, the first ten amendments to the U.S. Constitution—the Bill of Rights—went into effect with ratification by Virginia.

On this date:

In 1836, the Patent Office in Washington burned.

In 1875, at Chatham, England, a flying machine combining an umbrella and a kite carried sandbags to an altiture of 100 feet, then fell to earth.

In 1916, French forces defeated the Germans at the World War I battle of Verdun.

In 1919, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously upheld the National Prohibition Act.

In 1944, in World War I, U.S. forces led by Gen. Douglas MacArthur landed on the Philippine Island of Mindoro.

In 1961, the former Nazi, Adolf Eichmann, was sentenced to death in Jerusalem, Israel.

Ten years ago — The king of Nepal deposed and arrested the nation's premier and took control of the government.

Five years ago — The U.S. Gemini VI and Gemini VII spacecraft flew within a few feet of each other in man's first space rendezvous.

One year ago — The ousted Czechoslovak leader, Alexander Dubcek, was appointed ambassador to Turkey.

Collective Selfishness Decried by Pope Paul

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI says he hopes the spirit of Christmas will penetrate to a society "in which freedom frequently seems to favor the formation of great collective selfishness."

The primate made his appeal in a hoarse voice from the window of his studio during his regular Sunday noon blessing to a crowd in St. Peter's Square.

Your Money's Worth

Most Households Have Incomes Over $8,000

BY SYLVIA PORTER

How does your income rank? You are actually in the majority of U.S. households if the income of all members of your household exceeds $8,000. Out of the 63 million households in the

Porter

U.S. today, more than 33 million — or 52.6 per cent of the total — are above this income level.

You are actualy typical if the income of your household members totals between $10,000 and $25,000. Nearly 23 million — an astounding 36.5 per cent — have attained this rank.

You are in an increasingly important minority if your household income is $15,000 or more. Out of every six U.S. households, one is in this category.

There are 1,760,000 other households like yours if your category is $25,000 to $49,000. That's 2.8 per cent of the total.

And there are 251,000 other households like yours if you have achieved the $50,000 or more level.

How do you rank? Without tantalizing you further, here is a new Census Bureau tally which will show you where you place.

Hshld. Income	No. hshlds.	Per Cent of hshlds.
Under $1,000	2,016,000	3.2
$1,000-$1,999	4,289,000	6.8
2,000-2,999	3,895,000	6.2
3,000-3,999	3,886,000	6.2
4,000-4,999	3,603,000	5.7
5000-5,999	3,795,000	6 0
6,000-6,999	4,011,000	6.4
7.000-7,999	4,298,000	6 8
8,000-9,999	8,106,000	12.9
10,000-14,999	14,524,000	23.1
15,000-24,999	8,425,000	13.4
25,000-49,999	1,760,000	2.8
50,000-and-over	251,000	0 4

Why are you in your income bracket — whatever it is? Among the critical factors determining your rank are:

—Your skin color. The average yearly income of a white American heading a household is $9,898 against an average of $6,539 for a black household head. That's a $3,359 yearly gap which yawns into a 45-year lifetime gap of $151,155.

—Your sex. The average income for a household headed by a man is $10,795 as against $4,878 for one headed by a woman. That's less than half.

—Your age. The average for a household headed by an individual aged 45 to 54 is $12,182. This is the period when an American worker's income usually reaches a peak and the achievement dwarfs the $6,686 average for a household headed by an individual between the ages of 14 and 24.

—Your surroundings. Even though the average for farmers is swelled by the earnings of our agri-milionaires, the average farm household income today is only $7,244 as against $9,649 for non-farm households.

—But most important, your education. If the household head has finished college, the average income is more than $15,000, but if he or she has failed to complete an elementary school education, the average is less than $5,500.

—And as a logical result of your education, your occupation. If the household head is a service worker, the average income comes to $7,063. But if the head is a professional, the average will be $14.702 — more than double and a difference mounting up to a huge total of $345.755 over a working lifetime.

Each successive census tally dramatizes anew the extent to which we, the world's leading middle-income economy, are surpassing even our own aspirations and moving toward the world's first upper-middle income economy. And even though inflation recently has been cutting deeply into "real" incomes, we still come out well ahead over the long pull. So: "How are you keeping up with the Joneses?"

Couple Arraigned On 2 Burglaries

A Combined Locks couple requested a Dec. 23 preliminary examination this morning on charges stemming from an incident Saturday night in which a burglary suspect was shot and killed by police.

Irvin Zehren, 40, and his wife, Florence, 39, made the request before Outagamie County Judge Gustave J. Keller. Arraignment proceedings were initiated before County Judge Nick F. Schaefer today, but he disqualified himself, noting that the Zehrens are being represented by an attorney who has a civil suit pending against him.

The Zehrens are charged with the burglaries of St. Bernard Church and Xavier High School on Dec. 12. The criminal complaint naming the couple and Harry Mueller, 28, Madison, alleged that those three and Richard Eickhoff, who was slain, discussed breaking into the places before the burglaries.

Keller, after reviewing a bond study, reduced Mrs. Zehren's bail to $1,500 and allowed her to sign for the balance after producing $150 in cash.

Zehren was returned to the county jail, after Keller noted that he was not eligible for bail. Keller made the judgment after consulting a bond study.

The defense attorney asked the court "to enjoin anyone from further comments on the guilt or innocence of these parties."

He cited a comment made by Dist. Atty. James Long that the Zehrens were "principals in the crime". He termed this "a direct comment on the guilt or innocence of the parties concerned."

Keller replied, nodding in the direction of two news reporters seated in the courtroom, "They heard your statements and they can be guided accordingly."

Eickhoff was killed Saturday night after police, who had staked out Xavier High School on information supplied by an informer, fired a shotgun blast which struck him in the chest. Mueller, who also was hit by gunfire, has been transferred out of intensive care at St. Elizabeth Hospital.

He awaits a court appearance on the same two burglary charges when he is released.

Coroner Rules Shooting Death As Justifiable

building as police awaited the burglars.

The statement revealed that when the pair went into a crouching position, an officer other than the one who did the shooting also observed them go into the same position. Then, the closest officer fired in their direction. Two other officers hidden about 100 feet away also heard the halt order given three times, then heard a pause between the orders and the shooting.

Kemps and Long said in the report that "based on extensive interviews of all the parties involved in the shooting,...the police officers exercised extreme caution and took all reasonable steps necessary to apprehend the burglars without a shooting."

"Exercise of Duty"

"The shooting was in the proper exercise of their duties," Long and Kemps concluded.

"From all the circumstances surrounding the shooting, there is no reason to believe that the death of Richard Eickhoff was the result of homicide in any degree, or the result of suspicious circumstances, or of any criminal conduct, whatsoever."

The ruling precludes a coroner's inquest.

Lucey Orders State Austerity

MADISON (AP) — Democratic Gov.-Elect Patrick J. Lucey Monday directed state agency officials to adopt emergency restrictions on hiring and spending to counter a threatened fiscal crisis.

"The state of Wisconsin cannot afford the luxury of business as usual at this time," said Lucey, who faces a possible $500 million revenue gap when he assumes office Jan. 4.

In a letter to all executive agency heads Lucey referred to what he termed "an appalling fiscal emergency."

He requested officials to take three specific steps without delay:

Freeze on Hiring

— A 30-day freeze on hiring persons to fill staff vacancies unless the Department of Administration finds the hiring to be "absolutely essential."

— A moratorium on all new consulting contracts for the next six months.

— An emergency control on out-of-state travel requests, with approval only of essential trips.

Lucey said the emergency austerity move could not wait until the next biennium, which begins July 1, 1971.

"We must redouble our efforts at once to increase administrative efficiency," Lucey said. "We face an emergency that calls for extraordinary emergency measures."

California Had Colder Climate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Scientists say seeds, twigs, leaves and bones from an Arctic musk ox have shown Southern California's often balmy weather was much cooler 10,000 to 40,000 years ago.

Paleontologists reported discovery of the items at the La Brea tar pits.

Dr. George Miller, group director, said a seed from a cypress tree which does not grow now in California and twigs from an extinct juniper indicated temperatures were chillier at one time.

"The chance of getting information about the ecology of that time is like something we never heard of before," Miller said. He compared the finding to that of "the discovery of King Tut's tomb."

Oshkosh Man Will Face Four Charges

A young Oshkosh man will stand trial Jan. 6 on four misdemeanor counts brought by Outagamie County authorities early Sunday.

Michael F. Laufer, 22, entered innocent pleas before County Judge Nick F. Schaefer Monday to disorderly conduct, and three traffic counts. Bond was set at $100.

The three traffic charges, brought after he allegedly sped away from the scene of a personal injury accident on U. S. 41 northeast of Kaukauna, are hit and run, reckless driving and failure to report an accident.

County police said that Laufer was headed south on 41 about 2 a.m. when he struck the rear of an auto driven by Paul C. Volpe, 49, of 1725 S. Carpenter St., causing Volpe to lose control of the car and go into the ditch. Volpe was advised to see a doctor for treatment of possible neck injuries and a headache.

Laufer reportedly did not stop after the accident, but his car later was found eight miles farther south in the ditch along 41.

An investigator cited him for disorderly conduct after learning Laufer reportedly kicked out a door window at the Guest House Inn, 3930 W. College Ave., apparently without provocation. Police said that incident allegedly occurred shortly before 3 a.m.

Trial will held before a jury.

Lucey Favors Consolidation

Regional Governing Proposals Aired

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Intermediate, or regional levels of government, ranging from regional planning commissions with expanded powers to metropolitan governments, were proposed to Gov. Elect Patrick J. Lucey at the budget hearing Monday on local regional and state government.

Despite numerous proposals for governments between the state and community level, Lucey indicated he does not favor the development of more agencies, but, rather the consolidation of many into few, if possible.

Dr. Raymond Vlasin, assistant chancellor at the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, and Green Bay Mayor Donald Tilleman testified on their successful effort to get the state administrative districts reorganized into districts that would logically serve northeast Wisconsin.

The administrative districts ordered by Gov. Warren Knowles in 1969 provided for a division of counties in northeast Wisconsin that split several counties from those with which they normally deal. Vlasin and John Reeve of Appleton were named to a task force to study the district divisions and make recommendations for better arrangements of counties into the units that are planned to take state services into the state.

The final proposal was approved by Knowles and new districts ordered on the basis of the study.

Vlasin said the new Lake Michigan and Lake Winnebago districts have already provided study units in which to review problems and plans for the next decade. He said he hopes the new governor will put the administrative districts into operation soon.

He said the regional districts can serve to centralize local functions and services, such as utilities, equipment and data gathering to save money, and at the same time decentralize state functions.

While the northeast Wisconsin spokesmen seemed to favor the administrative district as an intermediate level of government, Milwaukee area persons spoke in behalf of metropolitan government.

Robert Jandusa, president of the Milwaukee Council, called for the preparation of a plan for a metropolitan government similar to the two-level metro organization in the Toronto, Ont. area. He called for planning, rather than study, to get the ball rolling on governmental improvement in southeast Wisconsin.

The plan he endorsed would provide for local governments and a federated metropolitan government in which officials of the community governments would hold office. The area he envisions as being in the metro would include Milwaukee, Waukesha, Ozaukee and possibly Racine counties.

Professor Martin David of the University of Wisconsin, a specialist in taxation and public finance, called for a study of the metropolitan government for the Milwaukee area. David, representing the Wisconsin Metropolitan Alliance, also favored strong regional governments for other areas of the state.

Within regions, he favored the sharing of taxes on an equalization basis that would take excess per capita valuation in some communities and deliver it to communities with lower than average valuation through a regional equalization pool.

Charles Hill, secretary of Local Affairs and Development Department, told the governor-elect that there should be a means, probably through regional governments, councils of government or metropolitan governments, for the local governments to have an influence in making state policy.

Lucey spoke out in the hearing, indicating a reluctance to favor expansion of new governments. "I am disturbed," he said, "with the freedom with which we create middle government levels." He cited the different forms of organization of the regional plan commissions, the administrative districts, the Cooperative Educational Service Agencies and the Vocational Technical and Adult Education districts as examples of the proliferation of various districts.

"I suppose it would be too simple and cute to suggest one middle level" the governor-elect said, that would consolidate all these functions. He was advised by Roger Schrantz that the administrative districts are designed to do some of the consolidation.

The other main issue discussed in the review of local and regional government was the assessor system. Suggestions ranged from the appointment of the State Department of Administration to the job of assessing all property in the state, to permitting communities to continue to appoint or elect their own assessors.

A key recommendation of the Tarr Task Force during the last legislative session was the requirement for county assessors, appointed on the basis of skill. The proposal was watered down to permit counties to hire county assessors after approving the concept by a two-third's vote. No counties have yet taken the step. Several speakers Monday asked that Lucey support a rewriting of the law to provide for a simple majority vote if he cannot support a mandatory assessor system.

Child Should Learn More Than One Skill

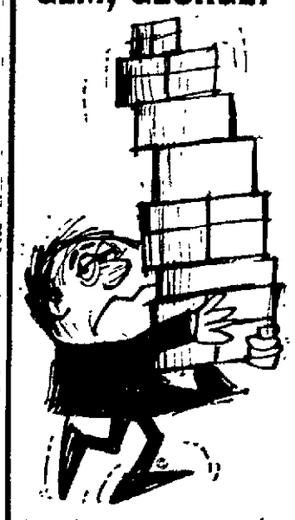

TORONTO (AP) — The parent who dominates a young child's time by teaching him specific skills is "almost sinful," a physiologist told a seminar on pre-school children at the Ontario College of Education.

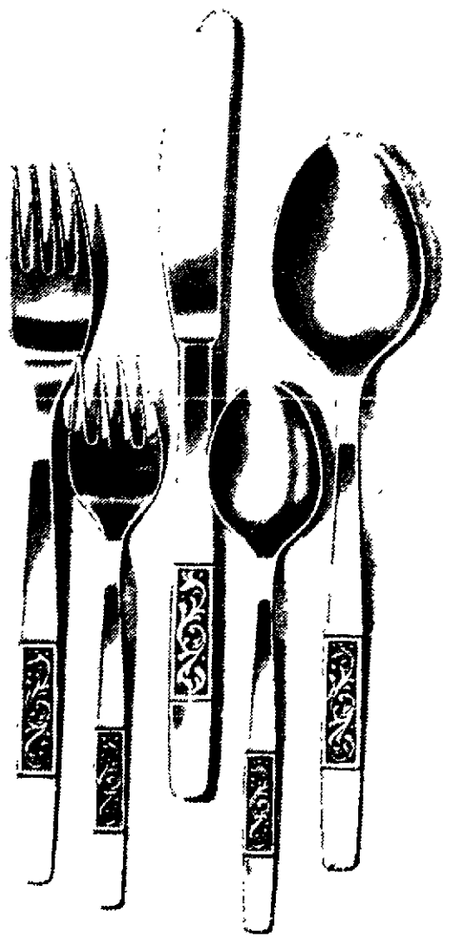

Dr. Robert Goode, a physical education lecturer at the college and the University of Toronto's physiology department, advised parents to expose pre-schoolers to all skills, not to concentrate on a few.

NCR Officials Added

Appleton Coated Gets New Board

Three key developments resulting from recent merger of Appleton Coated Paper Co. with National Cash Register Co., whose headquarters are in Dayton, Ohio, have been announced by Appleton Coated's president, John P. Reeve.

They include introduction of two NCR officials to the Appleton organization, naming of a new Appleton Coated board of directors, and basic organizational realignment.

As a subsidiary of NCR, Appleton Coated Paper Co. is an organizational entity assigned to NCR's Special Products Division. Heading that division as an NCR vice president and general manager is Galen J. Wilson of Dayton, who was recently elected chairman of the newly formed board of directors of Appleton Coated.

Also named to the Appleton Coated board of directors is Howard V. Lauer of Dayton, who has been appointed a vice president of Appleton Coated to head the newly formed NCR Paper Division. Lauer was formerly manager of NCR Paper Research, Technical Services and Manufacturing at Dayton. He and his staff are now located in Dayton.

Belief in Firm

"NCR's assignment of the NCR Paper area to Appleton Coated is indicative of NCR's belief in the Appleton Coated organization," Reeve stated. "In effect, this action will center the major NCR Paper activity at Appleton," he added. "This action broadens Appleton Coated's scope, for NCR Paper is an addition to our normal commercial paper operations and sphere."

Five Areas

Appleton Coated Paper Co. now will embrace five primary organizational areas, each headed by a vice president, all reporting to Reeve.

They include NCR Paper Division-Lauer; Marketing of Commercial Papers — Paul E. Truttschel, formerly Appleton Coated vice president of marketing and technical; Technical Research & Development — Thomas W. Busch, formerly Appleton Coated vice president of special products and technical; Manufacturing — Lloyd M Swaim, formerly Appleton Coated vice president of operations; and Administration and Finance — Russler.

Under the organizational structure, all of the foregoing will exercise functional responsibility for related areas of Combined Paper Mills, the NCR subsidiary acquired in 1969.

In manufacturing, three plants will be involved — the Appleton Coated operation in Appleton, the Combined Paper Mills pulp and paper mill at Combined Locks, and the Combined Paper Mills pulp and paper mill at Roaring Spring, Pa., known as the Bare Mill.

Reeve points out that the new organization shows potential of further physical growth in Appleton and "likely future transfer of some personnel from Dayton."

"When economic conditions improve," Reeve added, "we foresee the possibility of increased manufacturing activity."

Chill Wills Gets 'Stardom' Status In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Veteran western actor Chill Wills, 69, has been given his own star in Hollywood Boulevard's sidewalk.

The two - foot, brass-outlined star is one of 1,600 implanted since 1953 along Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street by civic boosters to create a "walk of fame." Each contains in brass the name of an entertainment celebrity, past or present.

Chill's unveiled Monday in front of Graumans' Chinese Theater, is next to the late Basil Rathbone's and near the late Dick Powell's.

The leathery-faced, 6-foot-2 actor said he had been in show business since he was 11, shortly after his father gave him a guitar and he began singing at Baptist revivals around his native Seagoville, Tex.

He made his movie debut in "Boom Town," a 1939 film starring Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy, and later was the voice of Francis, the movies' talking mule. He was nominated for an Oscar in "The Alamo."

Ex-Miss America Has Help at Book Sale

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Mrs. Jane Jayree Petersen, Miss America of 1967, has brains as well as beauty — she brought along two men to help her tote away her loot from an "all you can carry for $5" book sale.

The sale Monday was a warehouse clearance of 125 titles printed by the University of Oklahoma Press. A crowd of 2,000 snatched up 25,000 books in two hours.

The books dealt with art, music, political science and technical fields.

Papers of James Polk Discovered in Old Desk

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — Historians searching through a desk in a bedroom of the ancestral home of James K. Polk, the 11th president of the United States, have found a large collection of his papers and correspondence.

The desk contained eight manila envelopes filled with letters and papers collected into marked categories such as "Appeal to Mrs. Polk," "White House acceptances," "Household receipts of Mrs. Polk," "Family letters," "Private or business letters to Mr. Polk," and "Political letters to Polk."

Among the papers is a letter from a Mr. Ritchie introducing a New York photographer, a Mr. Brady to the White House. The letter apparently referred to Matthew Brady, who later became famous for his camp and battlefield photographs during the Civil War.

Historians said indications were that the letters and papers were filed by the president's widow.

The collection includes a note from Dolly Madison, widow of James Madison, saying, "Mrs. Madison regrets she cannot accept the President's and Mrs. Polk's invitation for Friday next."

However, former President John Quincy Adams, who had returned to the U.S. House of Representatives as a congressman from Massachusetts, sent his acceptance to the dinner 125 years ago.

Meany Voices U.S. Pessimism About Economy

Labor Leader Sees No Indication That Conditions Improve

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — "There is no economic upturn in sight. There hasn't been an improvement, and there is no indication there is going to be an improvement."

These are the words of AFL-CIO President George Meany, but it may be speculated that they reflect the growing feelings of millions of Americans as some of the economic statistics signal stormy weather.

And, the timing being what it is, the low state of economic activity is bound to be reflected at the polls, perhaps to a far greater degree than anybody suspected just a month ago.

Some of the more optimistic statements made by administration officials a couple of months ago are now being undermined by the facts, which of course include the unfortunate General Motors strike.

Indicators Fall

The latest index of economic indicators, which point to future economic activity, fell during September, meaning that the economy is likely to be sluggish for months to come.

The wholesale price index leveled off, but the overall figure hid a very sharp rise in the price of industrial commodities, which means continued upward pressure on the price of many manufactured goods.

And although the latest figures on unemployment may not be released until after the elections, it is felt by many business economists here that joblessness is still on the rise and may reach 6 per cent.

One indicator of future employment, the "help-wanted advertising index," compiled by the Conference Board from ads in 52 newspapers, fell last month for the seventh straight time and now is at its lowest since August 1965. It reads 162, based on 1957-1959 equalling 100.

The misfortune for the Nixon administration is that it may argue that the situation is coming under control, but its arguments are understood more by professional economists than ordinary voters.

Hopeful Sign

Paul McCracken, the President's chief economic adviser, can point to rising productivity as a hopeful sign, because any rise in output per manhour tends to reduce the upward pressure on prices.

Truly, a gain in this area was one of the most sought after goals of the administration. It is one of the most significant indications that inflation is being successfully attacked.

But there is no question at all that the promising forecast contained in this statistic carries not one-tenth the weight among the populace as the dismal outlook contained in the unemployment figures.

The administration can also argue that the General Motors strike hides the real advances toward stability, but ordinary people at election time aren't so impressed by promises as they are by existing conditions.

Speaking in London this week, Herbert Stein of the President's Council of Economic Advisers commented:

"The press no longer bothers to inquire what the latest statistics mean for the economy; they only want to know what they mean for the election."

Heading Upward

Stein's plaint is understandable, because he feels the economy is headed toward a healthier future than the current popular statistics may indicate. But that is human nature.

He also told his audience that it is "a pleasure at this time to be here where the U.S. economy can be discussed as interesting in itself, and not as a political issue wedged in between campus unrest and pornography."

But to voters, the economy cannot be discussed as interesting in itself. It is not an academic consideration among them but a very personal and emotional one—and one on which they might attempt to have their say at the polls.

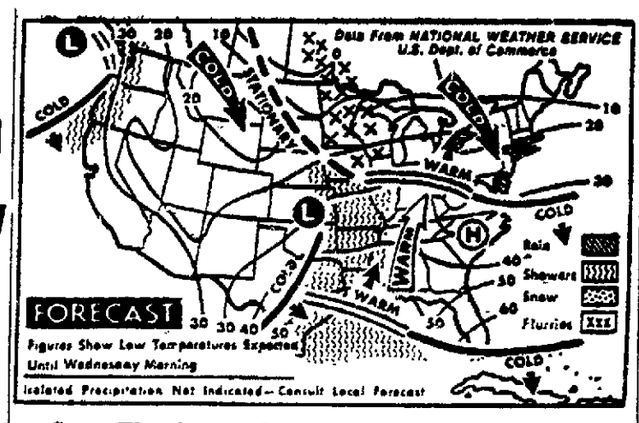

Is the concern over the economy wedged between campus unrest and pornography? Or does the political sandwich contain more of the bread and butter issues of jobs and inflation?

Rivers, 65, had surgery to replace a faulty heart valve with an artificial one last Friday.

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — County Judge James G. Sarres of Winnebago County Monday asked for a seat on the financially troubled and politically beleaguered Wisconsin Home and Family Council and promptly had his wish fulfilled.

After listening to critical discussion by members of the joint Legislative Council on the financial history of the Family Council, Sarres arose to declare his conviction that the latter agency is needed to provide leadership in the resolution of critical problems of family break-up and child delinquency, and to remind the legislative leaders that he had applied for appointment to one of the vacant Council seats.

Rep. Paul Alfonsi of Minoqua, chairman of the Legislative Council nominating committee, acknowledged that he had received Sarres' request but had not considered it because of the press of other matters.

Sarres was nominated, and the Legislative Council confirmed him in a unanimous vote.

The troubled family agency was created six years ago. In recent months it has been under fire for uncontrolled expenditures, and Sarres spoke after the state auditing department had filed a report critical of its practices. It had urged strong financial controls.

The judge told the legislators: "I want to be on this Council. Maybe I'm out of my head. But we must do something to stabilize family life in this state."

He said that in his work in the juvenile branch of the Winnebago County court he had found that 50 per cent of the children brought into the court for delinquency come from broken homes and that juvenile delinquency is steadily increasing.

He said that when he was offered the county judgeship by appointment he had hesitated because he had been deeply interested in his previous work as county divorce counsel.

After the vote of confirmation, Alfonsi referred to the doubtful future of the Family Council and told Sarres:

"Maybe you can save it between now and June 30." The reference was to the probability that the 1971 legislature will refuse to authorize funding for the family agency for the next biennium, which will start July 1.

Residents Warned To Shovel Walks In Kaukauna

KAUKAUNA — With the arrival of snow, complaints are being received by aldermen and other city officials that walks are not being shoveled or are ice covered.

City ordinance requires owners or occupants to have snow and ice removed from walks in front of the premises within 48 hours after a snow or ice accumulation. Non-compliance with the ordinance could result in a fine and work being done by city crews at the owner's expense as a special assessment.

Property owners who have walks shoveled by city crews will be assessed at 10 cents per frontage foot, thus a 60-foot walk will be $6. Police have been instructed to arrest persons failing to comply with the ordinance.

Person Presumed Dead After 7 Years' Absence

BY THE WISCONSIN BAR

How long must a person be missing before he can be presumed dead?

The Wisconsin rule is clear. A person who is known to have been alive may be presumed dead after seven years absence without being heard from. But this presumption alone is not proof. It remains for the court to determine whether the absent one is dead or alive, relying on the evidence that can be presented and the nature of the presumption.

The presumption of death after an unexplained absence for a specified number of years is a common law ruling which has been affirmed in some form in nearly every state. The expiration of seven years, however, does not automatically make the conclusion that the person is dead legally binding. This necessitates another court proceeding.

While it is unnecessary to show a diligent search for the person as a condition of the presumption of death after seven years, such a search will strengthen it.

There are some occasions when the court may declare a person dead in less than seven years. An example would be where the presumption of death arises after the missing person was exposed to a specific peril at the time he was last heard from, as having been a passenger on a ship known to have been lost at sea.

A special law known as the Absentee Property Act enables the interested persons to petition the court for appointment of a receiver when a person having interest in any property disappears and is absent from his place of residence without being heard from after diligent inquiry. This permits his property and insurance policies to be properly handled before the seven-year period.

At the same time, the law presumes that a person shown to be alive at a given time remains alive until his death is actually proven or declared by the court. Thus if the missing person had been drawing a life pension at the time of his disappearance, his heirs would probably be able to claim the pension payments until the time the court declared him legally dead. The legal finding based on the presumption does not in the normal case fix any specific time of death within the seven years.

'Let There be No Misunderstanding'

One of President Nixon's best known phrases which he seems to use in every news conference is "let there be no minusderstanding —." Unfortunately there usually is and the last one was no exception.

The resumption of bombing raids upon North Vietnam seems to be under consideration. Actually they have occurred at least twice on a massive scale since former President Johnson halted all such raids more than two years ago. Last May and again this November American bombers raked presumably primarily military targets in North Vietnam in alleged retaliation for North Vietnamese attacks from the ground upon our unarmed reconaissance planes. But the raids in November could have been a diversionary activity to take away the play from the attempt to rescue some American POW's. Or it all could have been the other way around.

But in his news conference last week — the first one in several months — Mr. Nixon warned that there could be other reasons for the resumption of bombing raids in the future. These could include continued infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into the South, which he said would imperil our troops as the withdrawals continue. Indirectly he referred to the bombing raids in Cambodia, although he didn't mention Laos where they have been considerable. He claimed that the Cambodian army was tying down some 40,000 North Vietnamese troops which might otherwise be attacking American forces in Vietnam. Presumably the raids which actually support the Cambodian army but supposedly only as a sideline can thus be rationalized.

But the "misunderstanding" area is a large one. The President insisted last spring when tensions were high in the United States over our ground troops in Cambodia that our air and logistical support would be withdrawn along with the combat troops before the end of June. The air raids continue and have probably grown in size and activity. He assured newsmen in the last news conference that he could conceive of no circumstances — "none whatever" — which could mean sending American ground combat forces back into Cambodia. Maybe. But if the Lon Nol government is overwhelmed by the enemy and Prince Sihanouk were returned to control, what then? Obviously Cambodia would become a base for attacks upon South Vietnam and once again the use of American ground troops could be rationalized as before — and perhaps reasonably so — as an effort to save the lives of American troops.

Certainly the President's tough line at the conference reflected the frustration most of us share over North Vietnamese refusal to allow International Red Cross inspection of POW camps or exchanges of prisoners, as well as the continued inactivity at the Paris peace talks. The latter, however, is not just a one-sided affair. While North Vietnam continues blandly in the face of opposing evidence to claim that it has no military forces in South Vietnam, the United States is stuck with the current Saigon regime partly because of some hasty statements President Nixon made earlier about how wonderful and representative the government of President Thieu is supposed to be.

There are misunderstandings, Mr. President. In this unhappy war there always will be and for a number of years after we get out.

"This really infuriates him...!"

Protocol and the Poster Girl

It is understood that President Nixon is an extremely busy man and the pressures upon him are tremendous. There are extremely serious issues with which he must deal, such all-pervading matters as the war, the economy, unemployment, civil rights and racial discrimination. The routine things expected in his position must sometimes be set aside.

And yet the announcement from the White House that "because of the President's unusually heavy schedule" he would be unable to receive at the White House this year's National Association of Retarded Children's poster girl and pose for a picture with her showed a curious insensitivity on the part of some staff member. Thirteen year old Roberta Scott is black and this is the first time that such a picture has not been taken.

Perhaps neither the President nor his aide who probably made the decision knew that the girl was black. The President recently declined to pose with some American medal award winners on the plea that he had another engagement although the suspicion remains that the refusal was because of the criticism mentioned to him by one of the winners. Certainly the President of the United States has no racial prejudice. But politically he or his aides may have written off the black vote — and with good reason — and at least they will be accused of such in this particular case.

Mr. Nixon always seems to be able to find time to spend at his California and Florida White Houses and on yachts of wealthy friends. We would not deny him the needed recreation and rest for a busy man. But it would have taken five minutes to receive Miss Scott and her parents and to pose with them.

Perhaps this is a move toward ending all such pictures and with this we would agree. The president is a busy man but President Nixon is also a very political one as his recent leave of absence from official duties during the congressional campaign indicated. At any rate, if the policy is to be changed this was a particularly unfortunate one with which to start.

NATO Must Remain Strong

At first glance the separate meetings among members of the Warsaw Pact and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would appear to show a softening of stands between the two "adversaries" as President Nixon dubbed them recently. But the only real change is toward a possible recognition of West Germany's special interest in Berlin and perhaps a practical, if not an absolute, diplomatic recognition of the government in East Germany.

At this point the possibility of scaling down the military forces of both sides seems disappointingly remote. President Nixon, in a special note to the NATO meeting, said that the United States will maintain and improve its forces because NATO is "confronted by a formidable mix of a potentially hostile force which is constantly improving." Until there is "reciprocal action from our adversaries", American military forces in NATO will not be cut back, according to Mr. Nixon. This goes even beyond Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird's earlier assurance to NATO that American troop levels in Europe, now at 285,000, would not be reduced during 1971.

While pledging an increase in organization, weapons and men, the ten European members of NATO, expressed concern if the United States did pull back. The French representative — who certainly did not reflect the opinion of the late Charles De Gaulle — flatly acknowledged Europe's military dependence upon the United States and said there could be no European security against Communist encroachment without American military participation. Representatives of other countries warned of the increased Russian influence in the Middle East and the Mediterranean. There was little talk about a detente.

And yet, while there seems to be some figurative fixing of bayonets, much of the discussion and the official speeches could be defensive. There is a move toward increased relations between Eastern and Western Europe and by no means have the advances been made entirely by the West. There is West German recognition of Polish and German borders although the treaty is yet to be ratified by the Bundestag. There is a holdout on further agreements until the West German voice in the affairs of West Berlin is acknowledged by the Communists. There probably will be some sort of recognition of East Germany or the status quo in all of Europe. The East needs the West for economic reasons. The West wants no war.

It appears likely that conventional military forces on both sides will be maintained at about the same strength as they have in the past. We do not have any facts to back up President Nixon's claim that the adversary is improving his position. This has been a charge of Mr. Nixon's Administration as far as Russian military might is concerned for the last year and presumably he has some evidence. Actually a balance is advisable in Europe of conventional forces so that neither side would have to turn to nuclear power in case of an outbreak of hostilities. Presumably the same is true of nuclear devices but the current ability for "overkill" is so great that any balance seems irrelevant.

The Communist fears still are obvious in that immigration to a non-Communist country still is practically prohibited. If an all-European security conference ever is held this should be one of the major facts presented from our side.

Alliance of Cities Broadens Program of Legislative Action

BY JOHN WYNGAARD
Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The Alliance of Cities as a lobbying instrument was established a few years ago by Milwaukee Mayor Henry Maier. He has managed to persuade 14 mayors of other major cities to collaborate with him. The Alliance has evidently concluded that the issue of redistribution of the locality shares of state-imposed taxes is too narrow a base upon which to build a successful urban political front.

Wyngaard

The conclusion, if the deduction is correct, is a prudent one.

If the Alliance wins the redistribution issue, it would mean that it will surrender its excuse for being, and the idea of permitting an organization of public officials to die runs contrary to the nature of politics and politicians.

If the Alliance loses, which is a more likely result, it would also have a slender foundation upon which to justify its existence and the dues levies upon its member cities. It is now being assumed that because the Democrats won the governorship and will control the new Assembly, the long-standing distribution formulas are likely to be modified.

No Less Willing

But that is a doubtful assumption. The rural Democrat is no more likely to be willing to arouse the antagonism of his constituents for the cause of aiding the cities than the Republican he deposed.

The broader plan for aid to the larger communities contains some measurably positive approaches. But they are mostly picked up from the previous efforts of the League of Wisconsin Municipalities, the voice of local governments that has been heard in legislative halls for half a century.

These are good programs, for the most part. What is curious is the espousal of them by the Alliance, when its member cities are already members of the League, and paying dues to it, and the League for years has advocated them.

When the Alliance announces with considerable formality that it has bills to make the annexation laws more workable, to provide more state money for categorical local services such as law enforcement, and to replace revenues forfeited because of the exemption of certain properties from the tax roll, among other familiar propositions, it should pay royalties to the League which has copyrighted most of them.

Local Tax on Incomes

The most novel of the Alliance aspirations is state enabling legislation to permit local income taxation for the relief of the property tax pressure that is worrying most of the mayors of the larger cities, and is a legitimate and volatile problem from any point of view.

The Alliance wants a law to permit "piggy-back" income taxes by counties, at their option, and administered by the state through the machinery now used for the state levied tax on incomes.

This is an optimistic objective, indeed.

Is it likely that there is any county board in Wisconsin that would vote to impose such a new tax upon all the residents of the county, with 75 per cent of the yield paid into city treasuries, as the Alliance proposes?

Is it likely that any county board would impose such a tax upon its residents (and commuters, in the Alliance plan) when a neighboring urban county does not have such a tax?

Is it a serious possibility that any locality will enact any other form of tax than the property tax, for all of the complaining and worrying that is being heard about that most ancient of levies?

Outlook Is Doubtful

It is extremely doubtful. What the local politicians really want is the legislature to accept the onus of raising taxes, while permitting them to spend the proceeds and to get the credit for reducing local taxes now levied.

The lesson is eloquently told in the local option taxes authorized by the legislature recently. There is a hotel tax. Only a handful of jurisdictions have adopted it. There is authority for a local auto tax. No jurisdiction has used it. There is authority for a county sales tax. It seems unlikely that more than a handful of local officials remember it.

A Word Edgewise

Ireland Adopts Tough Policy To Curb Its Troublemakers

BY JOHN P. ROCHE

Well, now the Irish have done it. Discovering that the Canadians were prepared to tolerate the suspension of basic rights in an effort to break the terrorist Front for the Liberation of Quebec (FLQ), the Dublin government has embraced DORA. DORA is the old British Defense of the Realm Act which provided for special wartime restrictions on legal rights, notably for preventive detention without judicial hearings and unlimited police searches and seizures. DORA was translated into French for use in Quebec; its Gaelic version is the 1940 Offenses Against the State Act.

In Ireland, as in Canada, the excuse is that nothing short of severe wartime anti-subversive measures can effectively contain violent extremism — in the Irish case, the Irish Republican Army and two of its splinter groups. So the cops are out on their sweeps and detention camps are being established.

Unlike U. S. Law

It is necessary again to emphasize that preventive detention under DORA is a completely different proposition from what has been called preventive detention in recent American crime bills. The District of Columbia Crime Bill, for example, contained a provision for pretrial detention up to 60 days for three categories of high risk criminals. But the decision on whether an accused individual falls into one of these categories lies with a judge, not with the chief of police. It is, in other words, a judicial determination, not an administrative decision.

What happened in Canada and is now going forward in Ireland is that the Minister of Justice administratively decides who can be put on ice (by the cops) and there is no way the courts can intervene for a stipulated period of time. (This period has just been cut from three weeks to one week in Canada.) Suspects are packed off to jail without any judges or lawyers getting into the act. As I have observed before, it is a policeman's dream of heaven.

By a curious coincidence, the same paper that carried the news that Irish Prime Minister Jack Lynch had opted for DORA had a front-page story on the apprehension in New York of six supposed Weathermen who were allegedly caught in the process of trying to fire-bomb a bank. On the basis of apparently good police work, they were virtually photographed at work. But note the sequence: the police had them under surveillance for six months, allegedly caught them in flagrante delicto, arrested them and took them before a magistrate. There a defense attorney appeared and the judicial process began its customary work. They have been indicted and will probably be denied bail (bail jumping is part of the revolutionary scenario these days), but that decision will be made by the judge.

Not the Answer

Now I don't want to downplay the problems that the Canadians and Irish have with extremist groups, but somebody has to break the news to them. When it comes to violence they are in the little league. There has probably been more so-called revolutionary violence in New York City in the last six months than the Canadians have had in a century. Can you imagine the joy with which New York's "finest" would go to work if only they had DORA? They would go through Greenwich Village like Sherman went through Georgia. No need for search warrants! Put a selection of mainliners on ice for a week and they would name every pusher they had met in 20 years. None of those damn lawyers. . . .Oh, wouldn't it be beautiful?

No. It would be both wrong and, thank God, unconstitutional. While I hold law enforcement in high regard, I also have a very pessimistic view of human nature. I have never known a prosecuting attorney who did not, I'm certain, secretly regret the abolition of torture. I have never known anyone, myself included, who did not at one time or another want to lynch the perpetrator of a particularly horrible crime — the rape-murder of a little girl, for example.

A decent, democratic society has institutions that are deliberately designed to contain these impulses — among them due process of law. We may run risks, but hard police work, with all its slowness and inefficiency, is vastly preferable to DORA. It is worth noting that J. Edgar Hoover, who has taken a lot of flak from us liberals over the years, has always shared this view: he was one of the few men in the government who (privately, of course) opposed the DORA-style detention of the Japanese-Americans in 1942!

Gun Registration Is Ludicrous Proposal

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

As long as you have the right to publish an opinionated, inconsistent article then I feel that I am allowed to take exception to it.

How can you accept Mr. Hoover's ideas on the simplicity of gun registration, and yet refuse to listen to him regarding the possibility of organized treason?

I suppose you would intend to have everyone register all of their guns at either a federal or state level, or both. But why? To trace a lost or stolen gun to its original owner? Or perhaps to prosecute a criminal for having an unregistered gun after he has committed a more serious felony?

In addition, this would make potential felons out of millions of people who have an old forgotten gun, unregistered someplace in the attic. To me, the idea of gun registration at federal or state level is ludicrous. It would neither prevent nor deter crime in the country.

In order to keep the records and enforce gun registration, it would require still another government bureau and thousands of employees. As usual — legislation, registration, taxation.

Have you ever stopped to consider that it costs us more and more each year to have the government tell us what we can do less and less of?

I can't understand why so many people spend so much time legislating against each other: cat lovers vs. dog lovers; adults vs. youth; abstainers vs. drinkers; committees vs. anything that's "in", etc.

And if you think, "The conspiracy fear is nonsense," perhaps you should pay more attention to the stories published daily in The Post-Crescent.

Now is as good a time as any for all of us to start thinking positively instead of negatively.

'Frogopolis Insane Hospital'

100 YEARS AGO

Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for Dec. 17, 1870.

There was great excitement in Oshkosh here last Friday.

Several large contracts were let for building the Insane Asylum. The presence of a few Fond du Lac, Milwaukee and Madison contractors disturbed Oshkosh builders fearfully, but it all ended in smoke, as the proceedings were illegal, and the contracts cannot be let until next February — Fond du Lac Reporter.

There is scarce a doubt that the Legislature will promptly repeal the act under which the wretched location was made, pursuant to a corrupt bargain previously entered into; that an appropriation will be made for the building of another wing to the present hospital near Madison, as recommended by the superintendent; that a definite location for a second hospital will be made at Tomah or Sparta by act of Legislation; and the location of the third, or north-eastern hospital be left to future events.

To quote the Hon. James Ross, with his hat off, "the general aspect foreshadow these events and the whang-doodle mourneth for its first-born."

25 YEARS AGO

Lawrence Bouche was elected president of Kaukauna local no. 20, International Brotherhood of Papermakers. Others elected were John Reynebeau, vice president; Ernest Tomashek, financial secretary; Howard Zuelzke, recording secretary, Ben Verhagen, treasurer, and Arthur Vanevenhoven, trustee.

Members of the adjustment committees at the upper and lower Thilmany mills were Henry Maes, Otto Doering and John Wodjenski, upper mill, Louis Killian, Samuel Pomeroy and Ernest Thomashek at the lower.

Robert Scherzinger and Ralph Kasten were co-chairmen for the party being planned by the Appleton Bachelor's Club, composed of discharged veterans from the armed forces. The party was to be a Christmas formal at Castle Hall on the coming Dec. 26.

No Ideology Can Justify Devastation of Vietnam

Editor, The Post-Crescent:

I wish to commend the compassion for all Vietnamese expressed in Editor's Notebook recently in Sunday's Post-Crescent.

We are as callous as the Communists in a war we have kept going and expanded into Cambodia.

Bitter comes the military death count on both sides from day to day, but does this barbaric tabulation not overlook the continued inhumanity of this war upon the civilian Vietnamese, both North and South, whose families relate as dearly to one another as our own?

No ideology can justify the death and suffering visited upon a nation reduced to refugees and rice fields devastated for a generation in the play of power by foreign intervention.

Once more the celebration of Christmas by Christians appears a sham.

Muskie Leads Party Hopefuls

Editor's Note: Who is going to challenge for the White House on behalf of the Democratic party in 1972 is already a dominant political question. The following dispatch, the first of five, considers Edmund S. Muskie, a once-obscure Maine senator who is now the front runner for the party's 1972 presidential nomination.

By WALTER R. MEARS
and
CARL P. LEUBSDORF
AP Political Writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years and a long campaign away from the ultimate goal, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie is the front runner, the target, the Democrats' presidential prospect with the most to lose. He delights in the role.

His formal announcement of candidacy will not come for a while, but it will come. It is only a matter of time.

But Muskie of Maine is on the move, speaking out more sharply and quickly on major developments at home and overseas, planning to travel abroad—probably next month—seeking to enhance his foreign policy credentials.

Every likely rival acknowledges Muskie a long lead toward the 1972 nomination; Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts said it may be all but insurmountable.

One public opinion poll shows Muskie running ahead of President Nixon, the ultimate rival, 46 per cent to 40 per cent.

"It doesn't mean anything," said Muskie. "There are going to be ups and downs. I've been Goddamned lucky. It hasn't been the result of deliberate planning."

Evaluate Candidacy

In a Senate anteroom, Muskie says he can see no value in evaluating his candidacy, and proceeds to do so.

"I don't know whether I'm a front runner or not. There's no way of proving it, the polls are the only indication."

"As the front runner, you tend to become the target of the other candidates . . . But it also means that the front runner is a meaningful candidate . . .

"If there were a way of pacing this as you do a horse race, a peace race, I suppose the pace might be a little bit slower."

Then a shrug.

Muskie says he cannot pace what he did not plan. He believes his high rating in recent polls stems from his appearance as the Democratic spokesman in an election-eve telecast last month

Stroke of Luck

"I suppose in a sense that was a pure stroke of luck," said Muskie of the biggest single boost to his candidacy since named to the party's vice presidential spot in 1968. "How do you control that?"

"If the result is to get you running faster than you want to be running, that's the price you have to pay."

At 56, Muskie relishes the political campaign, those past—and that ahead. He has just been re-elected to the Senate, for a third term, with 62 per cent of the vote.

Now he sits outside the Senate, answering questions, and waves his left hand toward the chamber.

"There are 100 guys in there who would like to be President, however remote the possibility may be. And there are 50 governors. So who knows?

"So who knows?"

Methodical Plan

But along with the political fatalism, the talk of lucky breaks, there is a methodical plan taking shape. It envisions membership on the prestigious Senate Foreign Relations Committee, several trips abroad; an announcement of candidacy—"it's a question of timing; certainly it's not going to be the first of the year," a bigger and better organization, assembling of commitments to gain the nomination. And raising money—$8 million by one estimate.

There are, of course, rivals to be faced. The polls now indicate Sen. Kennedy would be the most formidable opponent should he undertake the candidacy he has foresworn.

He has said he is not a candidate," said Muskie. "I have no intention of expressing doubt about what he has said. With the kind of support that is shown in the polls, he can be a candidate any time he decides to be. He can change his mind, just as I can."

Nixon Vulnerable

As for the ultimate rival, Muskie said he considers President Nixon vulnerable, and the more so since the Nov. 3 elections.

"I think it was a setback for him. He tried to do something in the election, and failed to do it . . . In terms of the reaction in the country, he lost."

Perhaps, Muskie muses, he is not acting firmly enough to dramatize his role as top man among the Democratic White House prospects.

"Being the front runner, maybe I ought to act as if I were, and assert myself more. Maybe I don't do enough of that . . . I pre-occupy myself with running from where I am to where I want to be . . .

"It takes a lot of money to go from where I am . . ."

And where he is is a long way from where he was when the nation really heard his name for the first time.

"As I think back to the Ed Muskie of July 1968, would I have regarded him as a likely candidate for the presidency in 1972? Some lucky breaks . . .

"You look back upon it and you wonder, 'What does a man's reason and planning have to do with it?' "

In Washington, Pa., a criticizing youth challenges vice presidential campaigner Muskie; the candidate invites him to share the platform. It is a stroke that draws wide approval.

Kennedy Accident

Nearly a year later, Sen. Kennedy's car plunges from a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island, Mass., and a 28-year-old secretary drowns.

Kennedy forecloses any 1972 presidential candidacy.

The weekend before the Nov. 3, 1970 elections.

A band of Democrats raises money to buy the election-eve television time, and selects Muskie to be the party's voice—and image.

And so it is Muskie responding to Nixon, 15 minutes a man. First the President an old law-and-order campaign speech, scratchy sound, black and white film.

Then Muskie; low key, dramatic but simple, excellent production, effective.

"These events have put me where I am," said Muskie.

And it is obvious that he likes where he is—and where he is going.

Blimp Pushover For 'Flying Nun'

MIAMI (AP) — Sister Margaret Mary gave the rudder pedal a ladylike kick that elicited hardly a quiver from the big blimp.

Ronald Bell, the Goodyear pilot seated beside her, explained the bulky airship "won't turn unless you give the rudder more oomph."

"But I don't have any more oomph," protested the 99-pound nun. Oomph or not, Sister Margaret Mary, who holds a commercial pilot's rating and 450 hours in conventional aircraft, logged her first 15 minutes of blimp time.

A member of the Dominican Order, Sister Margaret Mary said she thought Bell had misgivings when she first asked to try her hand at blimping.

"But he was awfully nice and it was a delightful afternoon," she said.

Parish to Have Council System

SHERWOOD — Sacred Heart Catholic congregation will function under a parish council system. Details of the plan were explained by David Fredericks, lay representative, to about 30 parishioners attending the annual meeting Sunday afternoon.

Fredericks pointed out that in accord with Vatican II, more lay persons are encouraged to participate in parish work, shifting the responsibilities previously handled by the pastor and two trustees, to committees. As a parish delegate, Fredericks said he had attended several meetings and workshops and visited parishes with functioning councils to gain information.

The plan, outlined in a brochure presented to those at the meeting, was "very basic," he said, and it could be changed to meet the demand of the congregation. No objections were made to the plan or to those delegated to serve until June 30, 1971, which in the future will be the end of the fiscal year.

Harry Augustine will serve as honorary chairman; the pastor, the Rev. Michael Drexler, will be president pro-tem; Dan Sekorski and Clarence Weller are the two laymen elected at large; Sister Lois is the school principal, and Elaine Schaefer is recording secretary.

Weller will serve in place of trustee Cornelius Vanden Boom, who asked to be relieved.

Chairmen of the five committees, who will complete the policy-making council are: Fredericks, building and maintenance; Alois Thiel, finance; C. Geoffrey Mueller, education; Adelbert Kees, spiritual and Mark Buchinger, general services. Committee and subcommittee members will either be appointed or be volunteers. All chairmen had previously been elected to the finance committee or school board.

Mueller asked that the school board continue as an elected committee, allowing parishioners a choice of school board members.

Duties of each council member were set forth in the brochure, with no changes recommended. Fredericks and Vanden Boom were congratulated for their work.

Because books do not close until January 2 no financial report could be given, but parishioners were told that there would be no raise in the assessment of $180 a year now. If an increase were necessary or a different method had to be found, this decision would be made July 1.

Financial reports would not be printed this year, but a mimeographed report would be distributed as well as a report from the school treasurer. The finance committee is recommending that parish contributions not be recorded but that there be a notification of whether one has contributed his share, more than his just share, less than his just share, or nothing.

Father Drexler reported that the 192 paying units in the parish this year is 89 less than 10 years ago, with 29 names dropped from the roster this year. Several questioned the accuracy of the parish census. The necessity of having four masses each weekend in view of this decline also was questioned. These matters will be left to the council.

No major improvements are planned now, but the pastor pointed out a need for repairs in the rectory.

Princely Rank, Pay Ordered Resumed in India

NEW DELHI (AP) — The Supreme Court of India ruled today that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi acted unconstitutionally in abolishing princely rank, pay and privileges for 278 maharajas and ordered them reinstated.

Mrs Gandhi told Parliament her government will continue the fight to end the institution of royalty "by an appropriate constitutional means."

The 8-3 decision after 21 days of testimony restored $6 4 million a year in privy purses, royal titles, and such other perquisites as exemption from many taxes, free utilities, free medical allowances and duty-free imports.

Calling the abolition decree by President V. V. Giri "inoperative," the court issued a writ of mandamus forbidding further executive action against the maharajas. The decision also ordered the government to pay the costs of litigation.

The court's ruling in the class action suit filed by eight maharajas rejected the government's claim that the president had the power to abolish the privileged class without parliamentary assent The decision held that Giri has no "political power transcending the constitution which he may exercise to the prejudice of the citizens."

"Neither the paramountcy of the Grand Moghul nor the paramountcy of the British Crown has descended to him," said Chief Justice Mohammed Hidayatullah.

The court did not rule whether Parliament could pass a constitutional amendment abolishing the princely privileges. It said this "is not, and cannot, be debated in this petition, for no such constitutional amendment has been made."

The decision threw Parliament into near pandemonium. Rightist opposition leaders demanded that Mrs. Gandhi's government resign, and leftists and members of her Congress party urged that the legislative session be extended past Friday's scheduled adjournment for consideration of a constitutional amendment to overrule the court

Mrs. Gandhi appeared within an hour after the decision was announced and said: "I assure the House that the government is committed to its policy of abolition of privy purses by an appropriate constitutional means When the entire judgment is available, I am sure it may raise many important questions."

Next Move

She did not spell out her next move, but some political observers speculated that she might call a new general election with abolition of the former rulers' special status as her chief campaign plank.

The maharajas were given their annual stipends and other privileges in an agreement with Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, Mrs. Gandhi's father, when India gained independence from Britain in 1947. In return, the rulers of the princely states surrendered 587,949 square miles of territory and 89 million subjects—48 per cent of India's area and 28 per cent of its population—to the central government.

Since then the government has paid the ex-rulers and their descendants nearly a billion rupees, or more than $130 million at the current rate of exchange. When the decree of abolition was signed three months ago, the biggest annual privy purse was $346,000 for the Maharaja of Mysore and the smallest $26 50, for the former ruler of Katodia.

Conferees Agree On Job Safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate conferees have agreed on the nation's first full system of job health and safety measures, but some Republican on the committee held back signatures pending further study.

The bill passed out of conference after seven hours of debate that went into evening hours Monday.

The measure follows the Senate bill, which was union-backed Republicans, generally lined up for the House version, favored by the administration, balked at signing the committee report until they could give it further study. The House version also was backed by industry.

Power Fight Continues

Aide Says Hughes Signed Disputed Papers

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — One of the few men admitted to Howard Hughes' presence in recent years says he saw the billionaire recluse sign a paper later used to authorize firing of the man who ran the vast Hughes holdings in Nevada.

One handwriting expert told a judge Monday the signature was genuine. A second described it as a fake.

The man who said he watched while Hughes wielded the pen was LeVar Myler. He said he was one of five male special assistants working in shifts in the closely guarded Hughes office, had known his boss for 20 years and had seen him daily for the past five.

Myler, a heavy, round-faced man, testified he saw Hughes sign the document Nov. 14 in a bedroom of the three-room penthouse apartment where he lived atop a hotel on the Las Vegas Strip. The document was a proxy granting the general counsel and two directors of the Hughes Tool Co. power to act for their boss.

Hughes Irritated

Myler told newsmen after his court appearance he was with Hughes at the Britannia Hotel in the Bahamas until a week ago and that his chief is well and considerably irritated by the publicity surrounding the dismissal of Robert Maheu.

Maheu has been Hughes' visible alter ego in Nevada since Hughes moved to the state four years ago and bought casinos, hotels, mining property and real estate worth $300 million.

The tool company forces moved in Dec. 4—after Hughes left town—and fired Maheu, saying the proxy gave them the necessary authority. Maheu resisted, and obtained a court order blocking their takeover. Monday was the sixth day of a hearing on a tool company motion to quash the restraining order.

Testimony on Signature

The signature on the proxy statement was the subject of lengthy and contradictory testimony Monday.

Charles Appel, a Washington, D.C. handwriting expert called in by Maheu, said the person who signed the proxy was not the person who wrote numerous notes which Maheu gave him as examples of Hughes' handwriting

But a document analyst hired by the tool company. George Bradford of Long Beach, Calif., later said from the stand that the signature on the proxy was the real thing.

A Federal Aviation Administration official, Bradford testified he saw Hughes sign a commercial pilot's application in 1955. Bradford said he concluded the proxy signature was genuine after comparing it with the signature on the application and other documents.

New Wing Viewed as Alternative to SST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Development of a new type aircraft wing by U S. space scientists could lead, they say, to quick creation of a cheaper, nonpolluting alternative to the controversial supersonic transport

National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists say the wing that one day may lift the new plane—called the Advanced Technology Experimental Transport, or ATET — also may help the United States retain supremacy in the world's aircraft market

NASA has made no public disclosure of its work and the plane is still in the project stages, but news of the new wing came as Congress began final debate on continuing federal subsidies to develop the SST

The new wing was developed over the last five years by Dr. Richard T Whitcomb at NASA's Langley Research Center in Hampton, Va

Smooth Flight

Called the supercritical wing, it is a design advance that permits smooth-as-silk flight near the sound barrier, eliminating the bucking and pitching present airliners now encounter when they fly that fast

Spokesmen for Whitcomb reported the new wing has a flattened top surface and a curved bottom, a combination said to eliminate most of the shock waves encountered by conventional wings

Development of the new plane would be "nowhere near the cost of the SST," a NASA spokesman said, explaining the SST requires multiple technological breakthroughs and the new, slower plane would not

The SST has been criticized as a noisy pollution producer that may never pay its own way The SST s defenders say the faster-than-sound plane is a vital technological advance that will help the United States retain its lead in aviation

Either plane could be in production by 1980

No Direct Comparison

NASA spokesmen said there can be no direct comparison between the two planes, mostly because one would fly faster than sound at high altitude and the other would not

But they see the project as filling the vacuum between the SST and present commercial planes The proposed craft would fly at 35,000 feet at a speed of about 650 miles an hour, just under the speed of sound.

But NASA scientists say their plane—while faster than existing commercial aircraft—would use quieter jet engines, the latest advances to restrict pollution and eat up fuel at a far slower rate

And, because the ATET would produce no sonic booms, it would not be restricted from flying over the United States and would still reach its destination faster than anything now flying

Tear Gas Bombs Robbers Threat

ATLANTA, Ga (AP) — A robber has to be careful with the money he gets in a stickup these days—it may suddenly haul off and squirt tear gas at him

A tear gas device about the length and width of a dollar bill is being shuffled into stacks of currency kept in places favored by holdup men, such as banks and lunch stands.

The proprietor of a fried chicken shop told police one of the flat bombs was concealed in the loot taken by two gunmen who robbed him Monday It was set to emit a cloud of tear gas when disturbed. There was no report on whether it worked

Officials disclosed that similar devices have been employed in secrecy by a number of Atlanta banks

Post Office Cuts Holiday Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Christmas and New Year's Day mail service will be sharply curbed, the U S postal Service has announced

Only special delivery service will be available in all communities, though some city post offices open both days for mail deposits and purchase of stamps from self-service machines

On the Saturdays following both holidays, there will be collection, special delivery and lock box service

Local Postmasters can supplement all the planned services with certain others where they feel it necessary

3-Way Vaccine Developed Against Childhood Diseases

WASHINGTON (AP) — American and Soviet medical researchers, working independently, have developed a promising, experimental one shot vaccine against common measles mumps and German measles

Early trials in children indicate the triple-action injection —consisting of a special mixture of vaccines previously available against each of the diseases—is both safe and potentially effective, scientists from the two countries reported today.

Soviet researchers A.A. Smorodintsev and M N Nasibov, of the Leningrad Pasteur Institute, and Dr. Maurice Hilleman, an American scientist, told about the developments in separate reports prepared for an international conference on vaccines.

The conference is sponsored by the Pan American Health Organization and the World Health Organization

The Soviet scientists said in their report, "The use of such vaccines might provide a safe basis for limiting and eradicating all these very hazardous and contagious infections."

Hilleman, of the Merck Institute for Therapeutic Research, West Point, Pa., made only brief reference to the American-developed, triple-action vaccine, in a talk Monday on a more general subject.

Detailed Report

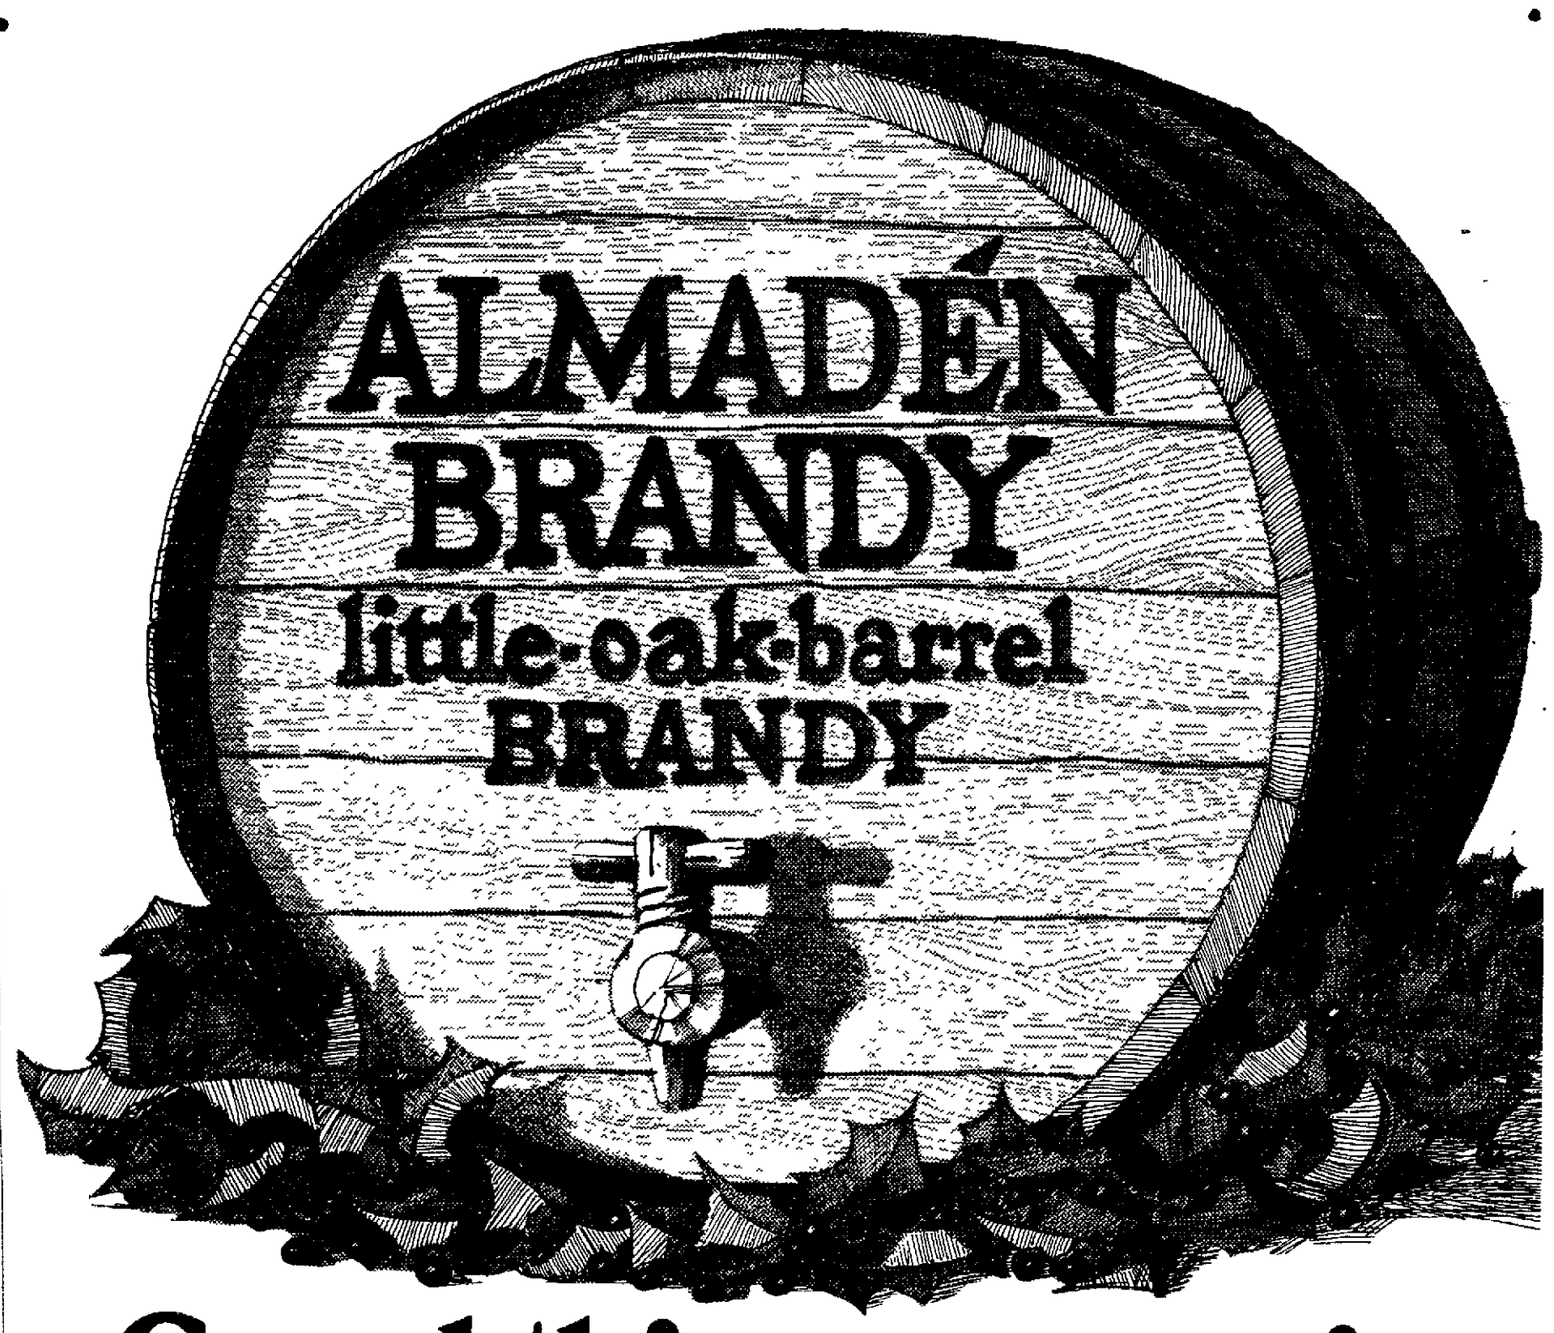

"Prime attention is now being given to combined live-virus vaccines, and it is of importance that bivalent (double-action) or trivalent (triple-action) combinations of measles, mumps and rubella (German measles) vaccines may be given safely in a single dose without increased clinical reaction and without apparent suppression of the immune response," Hilleman said

Hillman is scheduled to give a detailed report later this week on initial trials of the American-developed vaccine

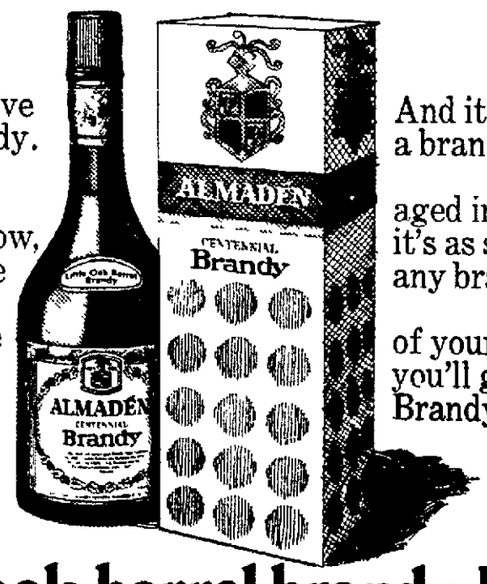

In another report prepared for the conference, Dr. John J Witte, of the Public Health Service's Communicable Disease Center, Atlanta, Ga., said the continuous decline of common measles that began with the advent of vaccine in 1963 leveled off in 1969

"In 1970, the number of reported cases was more than double the number noted in 1969," he added.

He attributed the resurgence, in large part, to federal support for measles-vaccination programs being "severely hampered" by the expiration of the government's Vaccination Assistance Act in 1968

Mild Sedative Might Benefit 'Night Riser'

BY G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: From reading your column, it seems to me that you get more mail from older people. Here is the problem I have, and from what my friends tell me it is also theirs. We call it "night rising," as it seems we have to get up three or four times at night to empty the bladder. Have you any solution as to how we can overcome this? It would be a great service to older people. — P.J.E.

I get letters from all ages from about 10 years old up — and occasionally a question from ones younger than 10. But since we gradually acquire more ailments as the years go by, yes, I think age has to be a factor in the number of letters I get.

A good deal of this "night rising" can be alleviated, but not by any single form of treatment. Among men, prostate enlargement is a very common cause of this. Among the symptoms, besides frequency of urination, is a reduction in size of the stream, which is a helpful clue in prostate trouble.

Anyway, that's a prevalent trouble, and for further information I refer you to my booklet, "The Pesky Prostate." Send 25 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of The Post-Crescent for a copy.

There are other causes of "night rising," of course. Chronic infection may be present in the bladder, more prevalent in women than men. There may be a kidney disorder. In women, a sagging of the bladder as a result of childbirth or other cause may have created a condition known as cystocele. Relatively simple surgery is the usual answer for that. Other causes: too many fluids before retiring or the use of diuretic drugs. These are best taken early in the day so that water release occurs during the day.

Still another cause of "night rising" is simply that older folk often are light sleepers. In sleep, the body processes slow down — heart rate, breathing, and so on. Sphincter muscles which control the discharge of waste from the body assume what you might call a "locked" position. You sleep, and your body rests.

But a light sleeper, who awakes rather easily several times in the night, will have periods when the body processes start to speed up toward a normal "waking" pace.

Thus to some extent "night rising" can be a response to this wakefulness. Assuming that physical ailments of the urinary system can be ruled out, just staying asleep all night, or most of the night, can solve matters.

How to do that? A mild sedative or relaxant — a mild "sleeping pill," if you prefer the term — can at times make a great deal of difference. The patient, with proper medication, isn't in a "drugged sleep," but he is relaxed enough so he can sleep through.

As my readers know, I frequently warn against overuse of such medications, but proper use of them can be safe as well as beneficial.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Are "food supplements" necessary in one's daily diet if one eats well-balanced meals? My friendship with someone has almost come to an end because she insists this is vitally important to one's health. Of course, she sells these products and thinks she is an authority on the subject. Also, is it necessary to have vitamins daily? — Mrs. D.A.R.

A well-balanced diet gives any healthy person all the vitamins and minerals (or other "food supplements") he needs. In the interest of being friendly, all I can suggest is that you stop discussing the topic entirely with your friend.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will two or three dry martinis on the rocks daily make an arthritis condition worse or cause more stiffness and pain? — Mrs. M.S.

About the only effect is that a moderate amount of alcohol, with its sedative effect, may relax you and give you a certain amount of temporary relief.

Arthritis sufferers can be helped Dr. Thosteson's booklet discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as outlining effective treatments and medications. For a copy of "How You Can Control Arthritis" write to Dr. Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent enclosing 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Sex-Linked Woes on Increase But 'Pill' Called Innocent

LONDON (AP) — Britain's chief medical adviser says sex-related troubles are on the increase—but that the birth control pill is not responsible.

In a report on the nation's health Sir George Godber cited a 24 per cent increase in gonorrhea among persons under 20, comparing 1969 with 1968.

He found births among girls under 16 "a matter of special concern"— with 483 illegitimate births recorded in 1959 and 1,486 last year. This is a 200 per cent increase in 10 years.

Nearly one-fifth of all official abortions were for teen-agers—10,000 out of 54,000.

"This is not a matter of oral contraceptives making sexual promiscuity a normal pattern of behavior in young teen-agers," Godber said. "There is plenty of evidence that young people experimenting with sex do not take any action to avoid pregnancy."

Dr. Robert Catterall, a leading venereologist, commented: "These child VD patients are the victims of a 'free love' fashion set by a small number of people, often in the entertainment world. If the present increase in sexual diseases continues it will be impossible to absorb the growing number of patients."
